Have you ever gone to a “Warped Tour”? I have. I actually got sucked into performing at one of these swinger events. Years ago, before I found Jesus, I was in a wrestling group called “Portland Organic Wrestling”. We did our shows at a tiny and filthy club named Satyricon. There are still a few people that act like they are famous due to this awful “wrestling” group, but I have given up.

I am now focused on shutting down the horrifying new style of music that has emerged called “emo.” These kids are stealing the KISS face-paint idea, mixing it with Insane Clown Posses Juggalo’s makeup and claiming to be cool. How is cutting yourself and not actually killing yourself cool? Stop being a pussy.

Many of you are wondering why I was talking about emos and the Warped Tour, but have you seen the schedule? This looks like a gigantic crying festival with a few anal rapes involved. If you do not like anal rape, avoid this concert series of sodomy.

Blood on the Dance Floor is playing. One of the members has a rape conviction, yet 12-year olds still worship him. All Time Low is playing, yet the guitarist was accused of murder. Chelsea Grin is allowed to play, even though a girl dropped dead during their set earlier this summer. It is said that she was high on a new synthetic drug called Monster Energy. They say that she ingested over 64 oz. of this drug in just 4 hours. These bands are encouraging kids to get high on this drug and get in “the pit.” “The pit” is a circle where kids go, so the bands can take turns sodomizing them. This makes the kids feel like the bands actually care for them and aren’t just making music for the money. This whole festival is a nightmare.

When I went to my first Warped Tour in 1995, it was punk bands that had something to say. Now, it is bands that cause people to die or kill themselves, like the Chelsea Grin girl. I have become disgusted by this new wave of suicidal music called EMO. The Warped Tour seems to have been taken over by it. Gone are the staples like Social Distortion, The Descendants, Reel Big Fish or The Mighty, Mighty Bosstones. Now we have bands that cry about being bullied, yet their fans by forcing kids to take drugs and have abortions.

As a Christian and Republican, I will not complain about these awful fakes, but I will point out that they are evil musicians and deserve to be murdered in the most awful way. I am actually not sure that some of these people are musicians at all after looking them up on the Interweb Netsite called YouTube. There was a “band” called Falling In Reverse scheduled to play that had absolutely 0% talent. Also in the lineup, was a band called New Found Glory...HAHAHAHA. Gross vampires everywhere! Do we need more Twilight references? Also, that band is just awful. Taking Back Sunday? Sunday is God’s day! Go away, you emo whores! Of Mice and Men? You probably relate more to the mice than the men.

Last year, at the Warped Tour, I decided to start a poll. I wanted to see which new STDs people caught at this show. I have 3,500 e-mails from people who have caught a disease because of this show, and that was from last year before Skrillex and the Emo bands became part of it. Cases of forced sodomy rose 743% during the weekend of this festival. Cases of forced abortion rose over 3,000% that weekend as well.

It turns out, that every year at the Warped Tour, there are 8,213 cases of pregnancy and over 15,000 cases of new STDs. Nobody reports this because Planned Parenthood has an abortion tent set up there. Planned Parenthood is destroying our beautiful white babies.

How can we combat this pure evil? Bands like Everytime I Die and Funeral Party are playing this festival in front of our white children. They might try to suicide themselves after listening to a band called Miss May I or Pierce The Veil.

The point of this article, was to show you that only people like Amy Grant, Michael W. Smith, Petra, D.C. Talk and Stryper are wholesome bands. If you do not want an STD or do not want to be reverse sodomized or do not wish to have a forced abortion, do not go to this festival because all of that will happen. For that matter, do not go to any music festivals unless Amy Grant or One Bad Pig is involved. Have a safe summer and praise Jesus.

Here we are in August already, and summer is flying by us at an alarming rate. One of the season’s greatest traditions is the summer movies—filled with babes, explosions, guns, more explosions, and great one liners. They save potential Oscar-winning films for the Christmas release dates, but summer gets the wild ones. Here at the Guy Stuff center, we are unabashed fans of movies, especially movies for guys. Recently at the bar I work in, someone asked, “Why do you guys play so many movies featuring violence, guns and girls?” I honestly had to answer, “Because I don’t own Sleepless in Seattle, Dirty Dancing or anything of that type.”

I am going to list my top five guy movies and then some by category. Please keep in mind, these are not my top movies of all time, but manly films and categories near to our hearts. In no particular order, here we go…

RESERVOIR DOGS: Quentin Tarantino’s first official film (he sold the script to True Romance for the funds to finance this one). I have been a fan of his since seeing this flick and everything that has come from him since. A neatly-planned heist, by a group of professional thieves, that goes completely off fucking track. From the opening scene, while the gang is eating breakfast, to Michael Madsen’s crazy little dance while cutting off a human ear, down to Tim Roth fabricating his cool and entertaining cover story, the film is always firing on all cylinders. If you can, check out one of the extras of Chris Penn talking about Lawrence Tierney showing up at his house with lawn furniture. It’s pretty hilarious.

FROM RUSSIA WITH LOVE: I am guessing most of us have grown up with Ian Fleming’s secret agent 007. Out of all of them, this is my favorite. It is the one, along with Goldfinger, that established many of the Bond traditions. While I have liked Pierce Brosnan, and one of Daniel Craig’s portrayals of 007, it is Sean Connery who I mentally picture as James Bond. Had some cool but realistic spy gadgets, iconic villains (Robert Shaw and Lotte Lenya), and über hot Bond girl, Daniela Biancha.

THE MAGNIFICENT SEVEN/SEVEN SAMURAI: The prototype for the men-on-a-mission/ensemble movie, with an all-star killer cast, including one of the two all time kings of cool, Steve McQueen. Yul Brynner leads his rag tag group of experts into old Mexico to save a bunch of farmers from Eli Wallach’s group of bandits. So many badass future leading men on the edge of stardom, it is hard to pick stand outs. Every one of them brought their A-game. Magnificent Seven was based on Japanese director Kurosowa’s classic, The Seven Samurai. I always end up watching these back to back.

THE BLUES BROTHERS: They’re on a mission from God, don’t ‘f around with them. A near-perfect comedy, featuring an awesome soundtrack chock full of blues legends, a killer car chase through a shopping mall and pitch-perfect dead pan from Aykroyd and Belushi. One of the first two films allowed to actually film in Chicago since the 30s and almost the last. Even my dad, who I am pretty sure was born without a sense of humor, laughs at this one.

PLATOON: Oliver Stone’s first major studio film and arguably still his best. Casting a young, pre-tiger blood and winning Charlie Sheen as a recruit set down in the Vietnam war. He is molded by two top NCOs—played to the hilt by Tom Berenger and Willem Dafoe. Berenger especially is extremely badass as Seargent Barnes. Backed by a young, but up-and-coming stellar cast, Platoon is without a doubt, one of the best movies regarding the Southeast Asian war.

Now let’s move on to my picks of films, by categories. These are all top guy movies and would be on a top fifty list.

BEST FIST FIGHT: The Quiet Man. The entire last part of the movie is a fist fight between the Duke and Victor McAglen. This is the movie I put in when someone says I do not have a sensitive side. Runner up: Fight Club.

BEST SHOOTOUT: This goes out to The Way of the Gun. Just incredible and pretty realistic gun handling and tactics. Runner up: Heat.

BEST MOVIE CO-STARRING A FIREARM: Inspector Harry Callahan, and his Smith & Wesson Model 29 .44 Magnum, in Dirty Harry. The archetype anti-hero wields the “most powerful handgun in the world” (at the time) with expert precision. This movie (and the follow-up, Magnum Force) helped create a backlog on the Model 29 that lasted for years. Runner up: Quigley Down Under, with the Sharps Model 1874 Rifle.

BEST YOU GIVE YOUR WORD, AND STICK TO IT, NO MATTER WHAT: The Wild Bunch. Another classic western, panned as extreme violence when it was released. This flick was easily one of director Sam Peckinpah’s best works. Runner up: Lee Marvin and Burt Lancaster in The Professionals.

BEST CAR CHASE: Instead of a movie, I give you an actor, Steve McQueen! From driving a hunter green 1968 Mustang fastback through the streets of San Francisco in Bullitt, to chasing fugitives in a Trans Am with a combine through a cornfield in The Hunter. Runner up: The Dark Knight.

HOTTEST BABE IN A GUY Flick: I know this one is highly subjective, but here is my pick, Ornella Muti in Flash Gordon. Exotic, hot and from the number of lovers she has in the movie, pretty available. Runner up: Milla Jovovich in anything.

So for now, enjoy the rest of the summer movie season. Until next time, smoke ‘em if you got ‘em.
I am going to list my top five guy movies and then some by categories. These are all top guy movies and would be on a top fifty list.

1. Platoon

- Backed by a young, but up-and-coming stellar cast, Platoon is as good as it gets. It is a war movie that is not just about guns and girls. It’s about the human experience and the impact war has on people. It is directed by Oliver Stone and is his first major studio film. It is a powerful film that explores the effects of war on soldiers.

2. The Professionals

- Instead of a movie, I give you an actor, Steve McQueen. I have been a fan of his since seeing this flick and everything that has come from him since. A neatly-planned heist, by a group of professional thieves, that goes completely off fucking track. It is Sean Connery's last film as Bond, and one of Daniel Craig's portrayals of 007, it is Sean Connery's last film as Bond.

4. Heat

- Runner up: The Dark Knight

- The archetype anti-hero wields the “most powerful handgun in the world” (at the time) with expert precision. This movie (and the series) created the modern action hero, and is a must-see for any fan of the genre.

5. Dirty Harry

- Runner up: The Hunter

- The archetype anti-hero wields the “most powerful handgun in the world” (at the time) with expert precision. This movie (and the series) created the modern action hero, and is a must-see for any fan of the genre.

7. True Romance

- Tim Roth fabricating his cool and entertaining cover story, the film is always firing on all cylinders. If you can, check out one of the actors who I mentally picture as James Bond. Had some cool but realistic spy gadgets, iconic villains (Robert Shaw and Lotte Lenya), and no Bond girls. It is Sean Connery's last film as Bond, and one of Daniel Craig's portrayals of 007, it is Sean Connery's last film as Bond.

8. Heat

- Runner up: The Dark Knight

- The archetype anti-hero wields the “most powerful handgun in the world” (at the time) with expert precision. This movie (and the series) created the modern action hero, and is a must-see for any fan of the genre.

9. Dirty Harry

- Runner up: The Hunter

- The archetype anti-hero wields the “most powerful handgun in the world” (at the time) with expert precision. This movie (and the series) created the modern action hero, and is a must-see for any fan of the genre.

10. The Professionals

- The Professionals

- Instead of a movie, I give you an actor, Steve McQueen. I have been a fan of his since seeing this flick and everything that has come from him since. A neatly-planned heist, by a group of professional thieves, that goes completely off fucking track. From the opening scene, while the gang is eating breakfast, to Michael Rooker fabricating his cool and entertaining cover story, the film is always firing on all cylinders. If you can, check out one of the extras of Chris Penn talking about Lawrence Tierney showing up at the Guy Stuff testing center.

These back to back.

The Seven Samurai. I always end up watching these back to back. Based on Japanese director Kurosowa's classic, brought their A-game. Magnificent Seven was released in 1960, and has come from him since. A neatly-planned heist, by a group of professional thieves, that goes completely off fucking track. From the opening scene, while the gang is eating breakfast, to Michael Rooker fabricating his cool and entertaining cover story, the film is always firing on all cylinders. So for now, enjoy the rest of the summer movie season. Until next time, smoke ‘em if you got ‘em.
Visiting Portland, Oregon during the summer. Portland is the 4th most difficult place to find a date, so Opportunity presents itself.

Drink more, wear less. Not only do us assholes in Portland always take advantage of the hot weather, but Portland is the mecca of nakedness. It is so hard to tell if a bitch has a bangin’ body when she is covered up with goddamn snow pants and fucking Uggs! Men grow a mustache and wear a beard, you put on a skirt and suddenly have sex appeal! Whether it is a BBQ, outdoor concert or a baseball game, get the guests together and get out and enjoy! If you are visiting Portland during the holidays after you got a bunch of fucking action over the summer, all the family and married folk are out wasting their summer away going to the river, hopping around in tube tops and men in shorts and tanks…is like a dating nightmare! If you are single, combined with too much to drink, is a recipe for some awe-inspiring summer strange.

During the summer, all the singles are out with single friends that you might not get to see the rest of the summer. Another thing that makes Portland great for singles is that it has the 2nd lowest rate of divorce in the country. This means there are a lot of recently single people looking to mend it. Whether it is a BBQ, outdoor concert or a baseball game, get the guests together and get out and enjoy! If you are visiting Portland during the holidays after you got a bunch of fucking action over the summer, all the family and married folk are out wasting their summer away going to the river, hopping around in tube tops and men in shorts and tanks…is like a dating nightmare! If you are single, combined with too much to drink, is a recipe for some awe-inspiring summer strange. Summer at last in the Rose City. Takes for-fucking-ever doesn’t it? Since we rarely get to enjoy the sun in the great NW, I highly recommend you take full advantage of making this one of your best summers yet! Have you ever wished you were single during the summers? Why wish. Do it.

Summertime is hot, sexy, drunk and furthermore... partially naked! In Portland, when the sun comes out, the clothes come off. It is so hard to tell if a bitch has a bangin’ body when she is covered up with goddamn snow pants and fucking Uggs! Men grow a NW Beer Belly in the winter and women stop shaving their legs. Fuck the rain and snow! You must take FULL advantage of living the hot, single life while you can in such a short period of time.

Join Ramblin’ in the quest for the Portland Summer Strange 2012! I can’t break up with that bitch or dumb fuck for you... but come up with something! Here are my top reasons to stay single and sexy this summer.

Drink more, wear less. Not only do us assholes in Portland wear less in the summer, but we also drink more. There are more events, parties and time laying by the pool that just makes people in Portland wanna throw an extra few back. Having less clothing on, combined with too much to drink, is a recipe for some awesome summer strange.

Thank God for family vacations! During the summer, all the families and married folk are out wasting their summer away going to family resorts. This means a lot of single action. There are more single folks in the bar than those married dicks that just end up taking up space. Those crowded bars and restaurants you like will be full of unattached, hot prospects—rather than having that creepy married guy hitting on you all night.

Skinny-dipping. Who doesn’t love going to the river, hopping in a boat or heading to a pool party? Lots of parties involving water activities occur when the sun finally fucking comes out in Portland. Finding some hot, single people this summer is so much easier when you are looking for somebody in a bathing suit. Make those days by the water fun and the nights even better with a little skinny-dipping action.

Fuck the holidays! During the summer, you don’t have major holiday events that you are required to be at. Your family will rarely force you to attend events that allow you more freedom! This is the time to get the fuck out there and enjoy some long weekends! Do as much away from your family as you can... having the “your still single” conversation is always more exciting during the holidays after you got a bunch of fucking action over the summer.

Opportunity presents itself. When you are single and ready to mingle in the summer, there are always a lot of things to do. Whether it is a BBQ, outdoor concert or a baseball game, get the fuck out there and do something already. These events always bring out new people and more opportunity to get laid.

Take advantage of outdoor activities. This is the summer to be adventurous. You have no relationship holding you back, so get out there and try something new. Learn how to water ski, jump on a raft or go pick up a golf club. You never know who you will meet while getting your pale ass out in the sunshine. Doing something different, for once in your fucking life, will be very attractive. If you haven’t taken a sex break during 18 holes, I highly recommend it.

What happens on vacation, stays on vacation. Make the most of your summer vacation by actually getting some fucking out-of-town strange. Yes, you must get shit housed and a tan... but what good is that, if you don’t fuck some hottie in a bathroom bar in Vegas? Who doesn’t want to get a blowjob in a tent or get finger fucked in a swimming pool? Stop being a fucking loser and make that summer vacation one to remember. If you are unattached and on vacation without getting some, you have a serious problem.

You won’t be the only one! It is very common in the summer for folks to break up. Being the fun, single one out of the group allows you more opportunity to entertain the recently single and hang out with single friends that you might not get to see the rest of the year. Single fuckers like to stick together. Drop those boring married friends and go find out how the other singles live in Portland.

Portland is the 4th most difficult place to find a date, so don’t make it hard on yourself. Summer is here and your style should be in high gear! Make sure you aren’t slumming around in socks and sandals or wearing those fucking skinny jeans that will make your balls sweat! Hit the fucking shops and get yourself some skin revealing, summer-appropriate attire that will get the attention your way, even in a city that is so hard to find a date. Walking around, looking like shit when there are women walking around in tube tops and men in shorts and tanks... is like a dating death sentence.

Summer is expensive. Don’t make things worse by having to pay for a significant other. Go out and spend all your hard-working dollars on Me, Myself and I. Go shell it out on your summer vacations, making it rain, long weekends with your buddies and buying shots for those dumb sluts like myself.

It is time to go enjoy the sun and cum before it’s too fucking late! Can’t wait to be face fucked by me every month? Check out my blog ramblinbroad.com, follow on twitter at twitter.com/ramblinbroad, or Ramblin’ Broad can be found on Facebook.
Being a strip club DJ is epic. But in times of tight wallets and loose pussies, it doesn’t always pay the bills. By “the bills,” I’m not indicating that my esteemed employers do not provide me with a living wage but, rather, that I cannot afford seven ounces of weed a month and weekly trips to the steakhouse, if I don’t hustle a little on the side. Seeing as how I’m a convicted felon with a degree from Portland State, I already have two strikes against me in the jobosphere arena. Thus, it’s easier to roll with my status as a local D-list sleazelebrity and live it up for all it’s worth, instead of buckling down and robbing a well-off meth addict or Tri-Met driver like anyone else in my position.

If my math is correct, I was able to earn just over $1,200 by putting on two events—neither of which featured segments from the chapter of my life titled “Things My Guidance Counselor Insisted I Do When I Grow Up.” The first event was inspired by Dick Hennessey, local entrepreneur and internet celebrity. Known mostly for his amazingly ballys, full-window mobile advertisement and the event with which it is associated, the Vagina Beauty Pageant (now in its third year), Dick is the kind of dude I’ve wanted to be since I bought my first copy of The Chronic, a confident-but-qualified pimp daddy.

Hanging around Club Rouge one night, I ran into two owners who I will call Dean and Gene. I had known Dean for years, and had actually worked for him when the club opened, but Gene was a new face. Figuring that if a dude named Dick could pull off a Vagina Pageant and taking into account the amount of alcohol I had consumed that night, I half-jokingly suggested to Dean that he should let me put on an event, perhaps something to do with live music or a theme night. Gene spoke up, “Are you the dude they call ‘Statutory’? Why don’t you do a Statich Pageant or something?” I considered keeping my mouth shut, but didn’t. “How about Little Miss Statutory?” Dean spoke up, “…that’s terrible. Let’s do it!” And it was born.

This brings me to my first piece of unsolicited advice to anyone considering following in my footsteps: approach the owners of your potential venue while you are both drunk, then immediately send a text confirming the date. Call them back the next day and remind them that you’ve somehow arranged to take a month off of work and invested in a shitload of sponsors during the time since you last spoke.

Second tip: somehow take a month off of work and invest in a shitload of sponsors. If I were to throw an 18-20 year-old dancer pageant, what would these girls win? Dean generously offered to let me use five-hundred bucks of the club’s money, but I’m all about the big digits and sought out liquor companies, glassblowers, electronic cigarette manufacturers and shady-but-talented photographers to fill the roster of prize providers for my lucky (?) winner—providing her with a legal-but-immoral 21st birthday (hell, if the winner was only 18, she may not even be around by the time I would have to cough up the liquor).

I never approached a single sponsor in a desperate way, but instead, casually. “Hey man, nice to see you. Oh, me? Not much, just getting ready to host a recreation of To Catch A Predator, but with legal, naked teenagers and in a swank downtown club. If you want to give away some of your product, I’d be willing to push it through but I can’t promise anything.” Side note: this Jedi mind trick does not work with every potential sponsor (Chuck E. Cheese...

The pageant went well and girls from all clubs and demographics turned Rouge inside-out like a prolapsed uterus. My personal favorite highlight of the night was the panel of judges: including a drag queen, two drunk regulars, two snarky strippers and Chops. I won’t spare you the gory details, as I just mentioned a prolapsed uterus, but I did manage to catch up with the winner aka Little Miss Statutory 2012, Layloni, who had this to say about the pageant, being a minor dancer and her dancing style:

My stage name is Layloni, I’m 19 years old and I currently work at Dolphin 1. I started dancin’ about three months after I turned 19 for some extra money. I think it’s a drawback in some ways, but it can also be a good thing because I can say, “I can’t talk to you unless you get a dance...” I don’t really think I have a style. I just get up there and have fun. Competing was scary. When I saw all the first girls, I was like, OMG what am I doing here? I didn’t have a plan and that made it worse. I think things will be pretty much the same when I turn 21, besides sitting in a cave for my shift.

Riding the “I’m the next Chris Hansen” ego trip, I decided to do something that rarely ever works: a second annual. The entertainment company I work for (1HRx) threw an event called Bacon Cup last year, during which local chefs entered their Frankenbacon creations into a loosely-organized contest that featured a few musical acts and a slightly boring format. On a whim, we “allowed” a few girls to wrestle in bacon last year. Although unplanned, this five-minute deviation from an otherwise food-centered event ended up being the only thing the crowd remembered. “Is Bacon Cup going on this year?” “Yes,” I would reply, “and there will be six different restaur...” “WILL THERE BE BACON STRIPPERS AGAIN?!” The week after Lil’ Miss Jailbait Idol, I hastily put together Bacon Cup 2: Pig In The City, which had a tentative itinerary that read:

I think I was still booking bands until the week before the event, and if I’m not mistaken, it wasn’t until the day of the show that I got the phone call every producer wants to hear in the span of their show business career; “Hey Ray, Chris went ahead and bought like two giant cans of lard to grease down the kiddie pool with, should we just go with raw bacon for the strippers and is it cool if we use the lard?” Yes, it is very cool if we go with the lard. As of Sunday, July 15 (a day after the event), there are currently 4,800 hits on the YouTube video titled Strippers Wrestling in Lard and Bacon. I’m still hunting down photos of the awesome, self-heating bacon-walled oven that the Sausage Shack created, but alas, there are dozens of image results involving raw meat and, well, raw meat. I don’t know how much bacon has in common with Faygo, but I’m starting to see the relationship. Third tip: give the people what they want, even if it means compromising every last bit of your original vision. Life is too short to play by the rules.

"I want to ask you, what does that tattoo mean?"

Oh boy.

He was referring to my inverted crucifix, I already knew it. Saying that tattoo to me is like saying 'that car' in an auto lot—I have more than a couple. But for all of it, none of my tattoos receive more inquiries than the cross.

Still, I humored him. “Which one?”

He reached for my shin and tapped, “What does this mean?”

I sensed wariness. As a young Hispanic male, I expect he was a Catholic. My Hispanic side already knew better, but the bored stripper in me forged ahead.

“It means that I disagree with many of the major tenants in many major religions.”

I nodded, listening. “Yeah, all of those.”

He folded his arms, immediately defensive.

“Like what?”

A litany of notions ran through my head and I picked the last one.

“Well, I have a problem with the general idea in most of those that women are subservient to men. I think people are people and should be treated as such.”

This seemed to confuse him, but he bit. "But, Eve was created from Adam’s rib, yes?"

I tried not to laugh. “My dear, I don’t believe that for a minute.”

The mood had suddenly turned sour.

“How can you say that? Do you think we came from monkeys?” They high fived each other.

He started giggling. His friend chimed in.

“Of course, you and I both know that’s ridiculous. If you consider yourself a Christian, don’t read this. Or any real patriarchal religion for that matter, because I’m about to take a huge, written shit all over your beliefs.

“The Missionaries – These are the rare individuals that will enter into a strip club with the seemingly sole purpose of converting the lost souls that inhabit there. Common behaviors include littering dance rooms with bibles. It’s literally been known to happen.

The Good Christians – These are the folks that will never step foot in a strip club, and so I respect them for sticking to their guns and not giving in to temptation. Good followers. The ones who truly prescribe to shame and guilt, I will rarely cross paths with—especially not in a club environment.

The Hypo-Christians – Like the boys mentioned above, they sit upon a holy high horse, but don’t understand or differentiate between other people’s sinful behavior and their own. These guys are cheap tippers.

The Bad Christians – In this category are, prison inmates with cross tattoos, gangster who wear rosaries. They know what a sin is, but always have repentance to rely on for a ticket to Heaven. These guys are great tippers and they like to party hard. You probably get your cocaine from these dudes.

The Fanatics – These suck sticks tend to spend their extra time outside of Planned Parenthoods, or making signs such as these:

If there’s one thing more ridiculous than ignorance, it’s egregious over use of inappropriate apostrophes.

I excused myself from these kids on the couch. No great loss to my earnings, I’m sure. Standing back in the room, I surveyed the crowd. One of my former companions pulled himself from the low couch and lumbered down the hallway to the men’s room. His sloping shoulders and loose arms swung pendulant. Yes, yes, I do believe we came from monkeys. Some of us less removed than others.

Canadians may look like Americans on the outside and have pearly white smiles, but on the inside, they are completely jealous of America. This is because, unlike Canada, the USA is not controlled by the French and we aren’t forced to speak a sissy language and acknowledge pointless holidays and traditions like looking for mythical “flying bells” on Easter.

They can’t stand the fact that we are completely free from any outside influence and hate the fact that we have a better government and stronger military. They even have the largest number of draft dodgers living there. During World War II, they surrendered to Hitler before they even sent any troops over to help out their motherland of France.

If you really want to upset the snow Mexicans, just tell them how superior our military forces are over their moose-riding army. Remind them that both of the World Wars that were started by their French rulers, were won by the mighty American armies. We don’t have to buy our military equipment either—we make it with our far superior American brains.

Canadians want nothing more than to be just like us. They copy our TV shows, try to make their cities look like ours, try to speak the American language and even buy our American cars. They have even sent many horrible celebrities here to spy on us already. Think about it. What use does Pamela Anderson have in America other than spying on us? Giving Hepatitis C(anada) to all of our greatest rock musicians? What about Keanu Reeves? No Keanu, I don’t want to take your drug pills and hop into a computer to play “Matrix” with you. Justin Beiber? Don’t even get me started on her.

When was the last time you heard somebody say “Hey, check out my cool Canadian-made car” or “Hey, I just got these awesome Canadian-made shoes?” Never! That is because they depend on us for all their goods and services. They are like America’s annoying little stepbrother wanting to look cool, so we give them our hand-me-downs. We even let them join the League of Nations, just to be nice.

Take a look at their sports too. Hockey? Boring. Igloo building? Stupid. Moose racing? Lame. Even their favorite sport of figure skating is stupid and gay. Look at their flag. How lazy are these people? Two colors and a wussy maple leaf? Ridiculous. Even the name of their country is pathetic. It means “village.” They even try to claim that they invented baseball, but we all know that baseball was created by the Union troops during the Civil War, not by some igloo-building maple sucker.

They brag about their universal health care, yet they are constantly sneaking across our border to obtain the best health care known to mankind. If they love their health care plan so much, why does even the Premiere of their country come here to get medical attention? The obvious answer is that American health care is the best. We use Capitalism to inspire doctors to compete to give the best health care.

What scientific breakthroughs have they made? The Ricker curve? Seriously? How hard is it to know how to make fish have sex with each other to populate lakes and streams? That wasn’t even invented by a real Canadian either, it was created by a Chinaman who accidentally hopped on a cargo ship to Mapleland instead of America.

Due to Canada’s dependency on America to perform even day-to-day tasks, they have developed an almost murderous hatred for us. The terrorists know this and they plan on exploiting that hatred. According to a recent report on alibaba.com, thousands of new terror mosques are popping up in eastern Canada. That is just a hop, gay skip and a jump to New York. Think about it. How can we racial profile somebody who looks just like us? We all know that terrorists have beards, almost Afro-Saxon colored skin, beady little eyes and a bomb strapped under their bathrobes, but Canadians look just like us. Canadians can just walk right over the ice border and we would just happily wave them.
across, knowing they don’t have the mental or physical power to do anything harmful to our much manlier race of human beings. If a bomb was planted in a local coffee shop, the last person you would suspect would be a light-skinned, blue-eyed, blonde-haired person.

We need to prepare for the icy terrorists from the north. We must be vigilant in detecting these frost bombers and report them on sight to your local authorities, or if you know the number to your state’s Homeland Security office, call them.

So, how do you spot a Canadian terrorist? How can we tell the difference between a Holy American and a soulless ice carver? I’m glad you asked. Here are some tips on detecting a hockey suicide bomber.

TEST THEIR INTELLIGENCE. The average American has a 47 point higher IQ than a dull-minded beaver beater. If you believe you might have come in contact with a Canadian, ask them a simple question at first, something even an Afro-Saxon or pool-cleaning Mexican might know. If they pass this first test, up the ante to a Jeopardy-style question. My favorite one is “This was the greatest human being to walk the face of the earth.” The answer better roll of their tongue like muscle memory, and if they don’t immediately shout “Ronald Reagan” in an almost orgasmic fashion, you know to call the INS and tell them that you have a block of ice for them to pick up.

TEST THEIR SPEECH. Due to a lack of intelligence, Canadians are forced to learn simpler languages like French. They have a hard time pronouncing basic American English terms. A simple question to catch one of these sneaky bastards would be, “How far is it from your house to your workplace?” If they answer using “kilometers,” you have caught them red-handed. Remember, anybody who uses Celsius over Fahrenheit is a Godless Communist. You can also ask them to spell a word that starts with the letter “Z.” Canadians don’t possess the ability to make the proper sound of the letter “Z,” so instead they say “Zed.” If you hear this odd sound roll out of their fancy, French surrender monkey mouths, you have a winner.

TEST THEIR POLITICS. Canadians, much like Obama, are Socialists. This test really only works at the office and should be done during lunch hours. An hour before lunch, order a few pizzas—only enough to feed the top workers (I guarantee that none of them will be Canadian). When the whistle for lunch blows, invite the top workers into the lunch room. Almost like clockwork, someone will show up saying that it isn’t fair for you to have bought just enough for the top workers. They will even acknowledge that you purchased the food with your own money, but will insist that you either buy more pizzas or tell everybody to split their slices in half so that everybody can have some. If this scenario happens, immediately go to your boss and tell him that your workplace has been infected by an ice terrorist.

If you do catch one of these Eskimos, don’t worry, they won’t put up much of a fight. Being from the direct bloodlines of the French, the natural response a Canadian has is to surrender at the first sight of conflict. Remember, Canadians might seem well-mannered, wholesome and friendly on the outside, but on the inside they are jealous and have been reprogrammed by Muslim terrorists and wish to see all American babies dead. Be ever watchful for this new menace to our society and report them on sight.

As a so-called “journalist,” I like to think of myself not only as a provider of information that may, under certain circumstances, be considered useful, but a connoisseur of such information when provided by other, more knowledgeable actual-called “journalists.” Whether as an 18 year-old punk rocker looking for all-ages shows that would let me sneak in a flask, or a 22 year-old college graduate looking for a job that didn’t require a food handler’s permit, I’ve always found utility in the free weekly papers like Portland Mercury and Willamette Week. Hell, I’ve even picked up a Portland Tribune on more than one (but less than three) occasions. Yet, throughout the last decade, the freely papers have become contextually focused on social nepotism (“Our Music Editor’s Band: An Exclusive Interview by the Drummer”), shoddy telephone-game investigations (“Does the Bartender at the Holocene Act Like a Bitch? What Three 86’d Patrons Have to Say”) and last-minute cover stories that are more reflective of an approaching print deadline than any sort of social relevance (“Getting Stoned With the Guy Who Owns the Doughnut Shop: A Five-Page Spread”).

It thus comes as no surprise that I was shocked to read the cover headline on an issue of Wily Week: “How to Stop Being Broke.” Was the city of Roses actually going to receive a researched, useful set of financial advice and job-hunting tips by an arguably established newspaper that once broke stories covering the Neil Goldschmidt scandal and police corruption? Would I be able to thumb through an extensive, informative guide and apply the lessons learned to grow my small business, or perhaps invest in a local startup with promising gains?

Of course not, as the piece (like anything else put into black and white print in this town) focused on strategies to live on the lowest possible income while still retaining one’s bohemian coolness and not getting evicted. Spanning a half-dozen authors and twice as many topics, the Week’s dozen-page story included the following “pointers” on how to avoid being broke: Take advantage of food stamps. Stop eating meat. Reduce consumption of alcoholic beverages to drinking during happy hours. Take out a mortgage on your house. Incur debt with the goal of obtaining a higher credit score. Etcetera...

Now, it might not seem like a big deal to newly-transplanted art students, but Portland’s standard of living has declined steadily since the Decemberists started ruining the local music scene and years before the chick from Sleater-Kinney decided it was a good idea to cash in our town’s utter disregard for personal growth and measurable achievement by televising it nationally. For instance, take the change in economic climate. In 2002, during a semi-decent post-Clinton economy, I applied at an AM radio station for the not-so-coveted position of assistant program director (an eight-hour-a-week job) and was subjected to three job interviews, a background check and roughly fifty qualified candidates with whom I had to compete over the course of a six-week trial. Two years ago, I applied to DJ at one of the most sought-after clubs in the Portland area and, after being hired, was informed that I earned the position due to my demo CD. “Did I beat out other applicants because it was a good recording, vocal delivery or song choices?”, I asked. “No, you were one of two people who dropped one off and the other guy just tossed a bunch of mp3s onto a CD,” my new boss replied.

If it’s so damn easy to fill spots for non-manual labor in this town, why the hell is everyone broke, without reliable transportation, unshaven, unwashed and gluten-free? Although the social aspect of thirty-something bohemianism is attractive, no one wants to be poor. In fact, indie rock bands and folk singers are making more money than ever on the mainstream charts. Those guys in the ripped t-shirt on the cover of your latest Pitchfork-sponsored CD purchase? Yeah, the drummer owns a yacht. Yet, this strive-to-achieve attitude doesn’t seem to stretch northwest of Utah and the only logical explanation can be a level of social acceptance of (and reinforcement for) underachievement, underscored by some sort of twisted logic that facilitates the justification of such stagnation.

Or, in Portlandspeak, “I’m on the list.”

Yes, I too am guilty of this phenomenon, but let’s be real here... Having a guest list at a five-dollar show is a Portland thing. Playing a show for drink tickets is a Portland thing. Getting a hookup because you know somebody on a semi-personal level is a Portland thing. Whereas, expecting a free show because you are so and so and work at that one place and know the owner is the epitome of a Portland thing.

So, how does one draw correlation between guest list culture, a city of underachievers and an article written by a free paper? Simple, cognitive dissonance. This phrase has been used to explain, for lack of academic clarity, the phenomenon of rationalizing otherwise incompatible thoughts. When put in such a position, people who know they are inherently wrong are actually more likely to back up their errors with bullshit statistics and post-behavior rationale (basically, saying “I meant to do that,” or “yes, I agree with Ron Paul on everything, even if it means I attend Klan rallies to support him”) than accepting or admitting to them. “Go get on food stamps” sounds like something a caricatured Obama would say on SNL, but it is literally what a newspaper (one that is owned by the husband of our next attorney general) told Portland readers to do. Was it satirical? Hardly a statistic cited in the Willamette Week piece argued that roughly a buck seventy-five goes back into the economy for every food stamp dollar spent. This claim completely ignores the fact that, out of every dollar loaned to a successful and expanding small business, seven dollars go back into the economy (and, of course, the notion that food stamps are funded by taxpayer dollars provided by folks who are unable to qualify for food stamps because they work full-time jobs).

This “explain away your lack of integrity with skewed facts like you were running for Mayor of Failureville” attitude permeates throughout the city. Whether used to justify paying a performer in chicken strips because none of the other acts get paid, or to explain to one’s ex-wife why child support won’t be coming in this month regardless of how many new tattoos show up every time the couple goes to court (this is a true anecdote). I blame the demise of a booming alternative/bohemian economy to a general distaste for success mixed with a contagious entitlement complex and a really, really low bar. In fact, I often tell out-of-town acts that in Portland, you don’t have to worry about raising the bar, but rather, you’ve gotta avoid tripping over it. When a local paper that has seen a steady decline in help wanted ads encourages reduction of protein consumption and endorsement of public assistance alongside paying advertisements for bbq rib joints and employment agencies, you’ve gotta wonder if the writers in charge are, in fact, working for peanuts.

“But look, these are some really kick-ass gluten-free peanuts and the guy who makes them is a friend, so I figured they’re a suitable replacement for a paycheck. Has anyone gotten an ad renewal from Ringside or Labor Ready? I haven’t seen either one come in this month...”
