As the holiday season descends upon us once again, it is the time for us to eat, drink, be merry and share good will towards all men (and women of course). That’s the spirit anyway, but sometimes in reality, we take a left turn at Albuquerque, instead of a right. The holidays are always filled with unique pressures and foibles for us all. Not the least of which is the art of gift giving—and by extension, receiving. Like it or not, the giving and receiving of gifts is a part of Christmas for most of us. Like most men, when asked what I wanted, for years I would reply “I don’t need anything. Save your money.” Well, after way too many years of whatever Ronco was selling at a kiosk in the mall, or some teal-colored cable knit sweater (indubitably followed by a trip to the returns desk on December 26), I have changed my answer. Now, I just politely reply, “an Amazon gift card or ammunition.” Easy, simple, no muss, no fuss and something I will always have a use for.

Just in case Cooper’s patented easy answer does not work for you or your wife, girlfriend or life partner wants something more specific or personal, we here at the Guy Stuff testing center have come up with a holiday gift guide for men. After countless hours of scouring the internet, we have come up with some excellent swag ideas for you, which are guaranteed to be better than a tie or fruitcake.

While, at heart, I will always be an analog man, I do appreciate many aspects of the electronic/digital world. First off, if you want a new smartphone, just get yourself an iPhone 5 or 4s. Save yourself any further grief and request one of these. We all may have been correct with VHS over Beta or Blu-ray instead of DVD, but Apple and the iPhone win the smartphone war, hands down. Another kind of cool, handy little device I discovered is the Anker Astro 5600mAh backup external battery pack charger with built-in flashlight. This gizmo is a pre-charged external battery pack that will charge your smartphone when you are away from your car or home.

Another trend that has taken a firm hold in recent years is the streaming of digital content onto your TV screen. Here are a couple of very cool devices to make that task easier for you. The Roku LT/HD streaming box, is a nifty little unit that has managed to shave the price down to a sexy $50 by jettisoning unnecessary features, while keeping all of the streaming content we love (Netflix, Amazon Instant, Hulu Plus, HBO Go, MBLTV and Pandora to name a few).

For all you Apple fans out there, Apple TV is a no-brainer. Airplay is the killer feature here, letting you wirelessly stream audio and video from nearly any app, straight to your TV. A little pricier (it is Apple afterall) at $98. The last item that I am going to include for your holiday electronics is the new Kindle Paperwhite. While e-readers are nothing new, (I have resisted them like the plague up until this point—preferring old fashioned real books) this one really caught my attention. It is ultra-lightweight, thinner than a pencil and displays the material like a real book. With an entry price of $120, it would make a lovely addition to a real library.

On to some digital brain candy for us to devour while we wait for Christmas dinner to be served. First up, two of the most popular video game releases of the season: Call of Duty: Black Ops II, and Assassin’s Creed III (a favorite of our editor in chief and sure to be on his list). In the movie section, we have the big boxset releases of the year. Indiana Jones: The Complete Adventures on Blu-ray collects all four Indy movies along with a boatload of extras. Christopher Nolan’s Dark Knight Trilogy is also released in a collector’s boxset. Also, to celebrate the Rolling Stones 50th anniversary, we have the release of GRRR—the new Rolling Stones greatest hits boxsets, available in three versions ranging from standard to super deluxe. All versions include the first two new songs released by the lads in ages.

Back in the 1890s to the 1920s it was common for men to give weapons to their comrades as gifts of appreciation, often fancy grade or engraved. I know several families where this tradition continues. To honor this excellent manly custom, I steer you towards Cimarron Arms. With multiple reproductions of guns that won the West to some very cool versions of guns used by Hollywood legends. Some of these include a version of the SAA John Wayne used, Clint Eastwood’s 1851 navy conversion from his spaghetti westerns and an awesome 1887 lever-action shotgun like the one used in Terminator 2. Something else to look at are the excellent 22 LR versions of the M4/AR-15 made by Walther for both Colt (22 M4 Ops) and H&K (416 22). You can still go out plinking all afternoon with a brick of 22s for less than 40 bucks. Or, if a good blade is more your style, I can recommend the Spyderco Tenacious priced at only $33. It has features normally found on knives that normally cost more than 2-3 times that. Also, check your list for the Al Mar SERE Series of folding knives, available in two sizes in either satin or black blade finishes. I have always considered these the Cadillac of production folding knives. They are also headquartered locally in Lake Oswego.

How about a gift for the guy that either has everything, or sadly, no interests? For years, I struggled with what to get my dad every year. His only hobby was working on cars. By 1973, he had every tool known to man, so that was out. After several years of seeing his books, movies and a set of golf clubs gathering dust, it hit me. He loves to eat! Not cook, mind you, but eat. So, every year since that moment of clarity, I have signed him up for one type of food of the month service or another. One that was a big hit and I recommend, is the Bacon of the Month Service by baconfreak.com. Subscriptions are available in 3, 6 and 12-month packages. Another manly gift to give and receive, that is usually a safe bet, is booze. This time of year, most distilleries and distributors have some form of gift specials for your favorite wingman’s poison of choice. I think that will wrap up our first annual Guy Stuff Men’s Christmas Gift Guide. Here is a traditional Irish Christmas toast that is very fitting for our industry, “Nollaig faoi shéan is faoi shonas duit”—translation, “A prosperous and happy Christmas to you and yours.”

’Til next year, smoke ‘em, if you got ‘em.
A real library. This is one of the killers. It has a price of $120, it would make a lovely addition to a home. While for your holiday electronics is the new Kindle Paperwhite (it is Apple after all) at $98. The last item that I am going to include is the killer feature here, letting you wirelessly stream audio to your home stereos. This is a no-brainer. With only a few weeks left before this doomed, wonderful planet of ours will supposedly be wiped out by the Mayan Apocalypse, it’s time to start thinking about what’s really important in our lives—like the fact that if we do survive somehow, how in the hell will we be able to survive without a Hostess Twinkie? Is there really any reason to even try to go on living without a Ho-Ho? When you look on eBay and see the doomsday preppers trying to fund their fallout shelters by auctioning off boxes of Twinkies as high as $1,000 a box, you really gotta start to wonder if this planet is even really worth saving. However, I do find it a little strange, that scientists have discovered the Twinkie was so loaded with preservatives that this spongy little piece of crap would actually be able to survive an apocalypse. Strange coincidence, that Hostess is perched to close its doors just before the end of the world comes knocking.

Meanwhile, back in the land of titties, tattoos and food carts, we here at Exotic, really couldn’t give two shits about an imaginary rapture, Armageddon or Y2Kaos. We have far more important issues to address, such as...

WHO WILL BE THE NEXT MISS EXOTIC OREGON?

By the time you’re reading this and after three months of dragging our naked little circus back and forth from one end of this town to another, we have finally selected the best of Portland’s exotic entertainers. On December 7 at Dante’s, the pageant will feature 15 finalists competing for $5,000 in cash, $2,500 in prizes and the cover of next month’s special Miss Exotic Oregon issue. After taking almost a year off from our promotional calendar for health and recovery reasons, it appears that absence has made the heart grow fonder. This year’s events have broken records for both participation and attendance (almost) straight across the board.

Another record that has been shattered, almost single-handedly, is the volume of the always controversial (purchased) votes. Exotic has been slammed by not only contestants (usually the ones that don’t win) as well as other “promoters” (who simply pick their own winners and offer no prizes outside of a pizza with a plastic trophy) for allowing a portion of the contestants score to be purchased in the form of votes (aka Mardi Gras beads). Now, even though every single contestant is given a complete explanation of scoring, rules and restrictions, it seems like most clothing deficient performance artists (aka strippers) could stand a course or two at the Derek Zoolander School For Kids Who Don’t Read Good. Okay, I’m not saying they can’t read, I’m just suggesting that they choose not to.

The pressure these events can put on an entertainer’s ego can be relentless punishment. So, I can understand the typical reaction for someone to think they’ve failed, because the girl that came in first “bought the win.” But, I’m here to set the record straight for those of you who actually choose to read. Exotic’s promotional events are all run in the same fashion. Scoring categories may vary from one event to the next, but the formula is the same whether we’re judging pole work or tattooed vaginas. And, this is how it breaks down:

70% of scoring is attributed to a panel of judges. Five categories have a potential score of 10 points each (such as grace, agility or theme) in addition to an anchor category which scores up to 20 points (such as beauty in Miss Exotic Oregon or pole skills in Pole-A.) The scoring in this category is as follows:

1st place receives 70 points, 2nd receives 65 points, 3rd receives 60 points and so on, in scores decreasing by five points with each position.

The remaining 30% is split right down the middle with 15% for audience response (measured by a noise meter at the finals) and 15% votes (the majority of which are purchased for $1 each, although a portion of votes are also awarded for placing in the top three positions in preliminary or semi-final rounds, as well as votes that are given away freely with all paid admissions.) Scoring in both of these categories is the same. 1st place receives 15 points, 2nd receives 13 points, 3rd receives 11 points and so on, in scores decreasing by two points with each position.

So now that we have you trained on Vaginal Accounting 101, let’s do a couple of sample scores to demonstrate how the...
Barbie received 4th place with judges, (55 points) 1st place in votes (15 points) and 8th place in audience response (3 points) for a total score of 73 points.

Bunny took 1st place with judges, (70 points) last place in votes (0 points) and 4th place in audience response (9 points) for a total score of 79 points.

Barbie had her boyfriend buy her $800 in votes, and even though her ass could divide continents, she didn’t bother to come up with a theme, and can’t dance, so the judges scored her poorly. Bunny was new in town and the poor girl didn’t know a soul. But she defied gravity on the pole and danced to a dubstep version of Swan Lake and released live swans on stage, so the judges and the audience fukin’ loved her.

Bunny won—without a single paid vote. Barbie lost by trying to buy the win without bothering to put together an act to go with her slamming body and didn’t bother to bring in a pose to scream her name. This may be an extreme scenario, but it should help the reader (and hopefully a contestant or two) understand exactly how this shit works.

Some online contests allow interested parties to vote as many times as they want. This method seems to reward people who have nothing better to do with their time, than sit online clicking their name as many times as they are allowed—oft producing grossly lopsided results. In a method such as this, award-seeking hopeful will attempt to nominate themselves in every possible category, from bushiest pubic hair to sexiest sphincters. On the opposite side of the coin, we here at Exotic would rather award those who earn it with serious skills and volumes of support and appreciation.

If you would like to see this production in action, join us for the Miss Exotic Oregon Finals at Dante’s on Friday, December 7 where each and every one of your votes counts! See page 26-29 for more on Miss Exotic Oregon 2013.

While three lovely ladies will be taking home a sweet cash prize for the holidays, we decided to check in with your local strip club DJs to see what they hope to find under their tree this year. So, we checked with the Bastard’s Guild to present you with…

A BASTARD’S XMAS WISH

1. Pygmy animals and midgets to make the strangest bestiality videos ever.
2. Shock collars for dancers late to stage. One free “Fuck you, I’m not playing that stupid song request” a night with no repercussions. Oh, and a pony and a firetruck.
3. Another year in an industry, where at the end of the day, you had good times with friends, made some money and got to put a smile on a few random faces.
4. This year, for Christmas, I want the Mayans to be right.
5. I want a strip club to do a full page ad in Exotic that folds to make a funny picture like the back page of MAD magazine.
6. All I want for Christmas, is for the mic cord to be ruled inadmissible.
7. Furry strip clubs. All cat girls, all the time! Seriously Portland, we need to make this happen. For a city that prides itself on being so weird, we have a surprisingly small furry community.
8. Would a white Christmas be too much to ask for? Just like the ones I use to dream of? Or, is it just gonna fucking rain more?
9. Large gratuities for quality genitainment.
10. This year, I want the hipsters to realize that we can tell the difference between fake intellectualism and real intelligence. They should follow up on this epiphany by taking up carnivorous eating habits, watching movies and listening to bands that the rest of us have heard before (we’ve heard these bands because they’re actually good) and they will all get lenses in their glasses, so they can see that their Instagram photo of lunch isn’t art. Pretty soon, all the hipsters will become so intelligent that instead of producing things like beanie caps with beards attached, one of them may actually create a new solar cell or a dick that can suck itself. Something useful, ya’ know? Next year, we can worry about evolving the Juggalos.

If I could have one industry wish for Christmas personally, I think it would probably be a month without a deadline (Greatest Hits Issue anyone?) So, there you have it Portland, hopefully all of your wishes will find their way to you and yours this holiday season. We’ll see you in 2013, with the all-new Miss Exotic Oregon!

THE FINALS
AT DANTE’S
3RD & BURNSIDE - DOWNTOWN PORTLAND

21 & OVER - DOORS AT 8 - SHOW AT 9:30 - $20 COVER - FOR VIP TABLES, CALL 503.816.4174
Another Thursday evening, and I found myself packed between the judges at Mystic Gentlemen’s Club for the third-of-four rounds of preliminary competition, which would advance five more hopefuls on the next step to the Miss Exotic Oregon Final—where for only the second year in a row, the reigning queen of exotic beauty and nudity would be chosen by her adoring fans, peers and certified industry critics.

As a stripper and former competition winner, I was excited for another evening of beer and boobs, yet I sensed the palpable nervousness amongst the competitors as they made last minute adjustments to their props and costumes in the backstage area. This night was a bit unique—I had my mother in tow. Yep, Mama Elle was in town and I had dragged her along with me, convincing her that it wouldn’t be awkward at all. As I explained to the other judges, “She was a dance teacher for years, so she can appreciate the pole work. And now, she is a teacher for mentally handicapped children, so she can handle the people.”

Our shows producer was so impressed by her credentials, that after we learned that one of our judges, Statutory Ray, had been rushed to Providence due to a bacon-induced seizure, Mother was signed in as a judge (which resulted in an all-female judging panel for the first time in Exotic event history.)

We scanned the audience. Two women and a young man stood out sorely—wearing plaid shirts and cowboy hats. I learned that one of the women was Belle, a competitor from Firehouse Cabaret, in Salem, who had just missed qualifying at an earlier round and was giving it one more try to make her spot in the semi-finals. She boldly danced to two country songs and was scored highly for having a consistent theme. A lovely blonde from Club 205, named Lexi, danced to two versions of Diamonds Are A Girl’s Best Friend with her tanned, slender body adorned in glittering rhinestones. At one point, she leaned in, smiled and presented Miss Exotic Oregon 2012, Lady Stockholm and myself with two tiny boxes which contained glittering earrings. A charming thing to do, unfortunately, there is no score box for presents.

The week after, I was seated at Club Rouge between Lady Stockholm and a now recovered and pork-free Statutory Ray. Ray was half boasting, half complaining of his sobriety. No small feat indeed, especially when it’s your job to be surrounded by alcohol several nights of the week. I sipped my Guinness and looked around. Maggie, from Sassy’s, turned out a delightfully retro set and I didn’t even score her down when she slipped on some dollars and squealed as she fell on her bottom. She handled it well and went into some leg movements and floor work. Cricket, from Devil’s Point (Miss PoleroticA 2010), turned out another amazing performance and even had the good sense of humor to show us how she really felt when she stuck her finger up her nose while inverted and dangling beautifully from the ceiling. I didn’t even stifle a laugh.

As we stormed into November, I was unfortunately not able to attend the first Semi-Final Round, which was held at Wild Orchid, but the intensity was obviously still buzzing from the previous round when I arrived at Mystic for the 2nd Semi-Final Round. Upon peeking into the backstage dressing room, I found Lara Croft adjusting her gun holster and tightening her boot laces. She smiled quietly. The Tomb Raider, was actually Miss Jordan from Golden Dragon, admitted to being “nervous, of course.” As Jordan is inarguably one of the front-running competitors to earn the next crown of Miss Exotic Oregon, (based on her scoring off the charts in her qualifier round), I asked her what she had considered buying with her portion of the $5,000 cash prize. Without hesitation, she replied, “It will go towards my baby’s college fund.” Considering that the woman has a body that looks to have been sculpted...
All-female judging panel for the first time.

Ray, had been rushed to Providence due to a bacon-induced seizure. Mother was so impressed by her credentials, that after we had dragged her along in town and I had dragged her along as they made last minute adjustments to the pole work.

And now, she is a teacher for mentally handicapped children, so she can handle it well and go into Soren High, of Mystic, her left hand dominant with my spins and lifts. She handled it well and went into some leg dangling beautifully from the ceiling. I was scored highly for having a consistent and nudity would be chosen by her adoring fans, peers and certified industry critics.

Final—where for only the second year in a row, the reigning queen of exotic beauty, the Light of our Dios, would advance five more hopefuls to the Miss Exotic Oregon Golden Dragon, admitted to being “nerd’s eye view.”

As a stripper and former competition winner, I was excited for another evening of beer and boobs, yet I sensed the palpitations of my heart. The intensity was obviously still buzzing from the previous round when she stuck her finger up her nose while inverted and screamed in approval.

Luka Bazooka was half boasting, half complaining, “I hit someone in the face. I’m so fortunate, they are like a family to me. And I’m so lucky to have them.” Next to her, Lark, from Sassy’s, informed me, “If I win, I’m going to get a new track bike, a Kawasaki 250.” When Luka Bazooka was asked how she would celebrate a big victory, she didn’t even blink before telling me, “A cat jungle. I’ve been saying it on Facebook for weeks. I’m not joking.”

Returning to the judge’s table, I bumped into Soren High, of Mystic, her left hand in a bandage wrap. “I hit someone in the face. Basically, I was drinking tequila in Los Angeles and woke up with a broken hand.” With multiple fractures, the petite pole artist had an admirably positive outlook, “I’m left hand dominant with my spins and lifts and the doctor took the cast off for this. I’m getting a hard cast put on tomorrow.”

The show began! Salome, from Sassy’s, slithered to the stage—her face adorned in glittering scales and a very-real snakeskin decorating her hair. As she descended gracefully from the pole, she took shears to her nude body suit and I shivered. When Luka Bazooka was called to stage, a half-nude policewoman (that I recognized from Lucky Devil Lounge) was attacked by The Dark Knight’s Bane. Next to me, fellow judge Lady Stockholm giggled, unable to hide her arousal. When Luka, aka Bane, finally removed her mask, the crowd screamed in approval.

Lexi, from Club 205, delicately ascended the side stage when it was her turn. The delicately muscular and lovely dancer delivered a fabulous homage to Natalie Portman’s Black Swan. The feathers on her shoes whispered as she moved effortlessly. Orchid Souris Rouge uniquely utilized an aerial fabric sling for the first portion of her set, then sashayed to each stage where she gracefully pole danced. When Soren High returned, she had donned her infamous pig mask and black sheer dress while dragging fellow dancer, Rian, on a ball-gag leash behind her. Even with a busted hand, her tricks were seamless. I’ve always wondered what oral sex looked like, piggy-style. Two of the evenings eventual finalists, Jordan, of Golden Dragon, and Envy, of Mystic, both had such an army of supporters rushing the stage that the judges had to stand on their chairs in order to observe their amazing feats of nudity.

At press time, both Semi-Finals have taken place to capacity crowds at both Wild Orchid and Mystic Gentlemen’s Club, resulting in our first two groups of finalists. Select contestants from previous rounds have been awarded one more chance at the Semi-Final Wild Card Round which will have returned to Wild Orchid on Friday, November 30 where 5 more hopefuls will join the first 11 finalists at the Finals. Since we can’t see the future, we would like to present you with the…

I smoke weed every day. It’s not important whether or not I do this legally, for medical reasons or otherwise, because I started smoking it as a rebellious teenager and I will continue smoking it until my slutty teenage wife pulls the plug on me in the retirement home to collect on her fortune. Sure, it’s a great (if not necessary) alternative to the pain medication I was using before, but that’s just a plus. I love smoking weed. I love the taste, I love the way it makes sex feel, I love what it does to music and I can’t think of a single issue of Exotic that wasn’t written by a mostly-stoned staff. Yet, I voted a firm no on Oregon’s recent ballot measure to legalize, regulate and commercialize marijuana. Here’s why.
I commercialize marijuana. Here’s why. I’m no fan on Oregon's recent ballot measure to legalize, regulate and sell marijuana. While I love what it does to music and I can’t think of a single issue that it can't be used to treat (as a matter of fact, there are hundreds of conditions for which marijuana has been shown to be effective), I’m not sure that this is a good idea. I believe that we need to address the underlying problems that led to the current state of affairs, not just focus on making it legal. For instance, we should be working on improving the availability of legal sources for prescription drugs and other substances. Medicinally, there are hundreds of alternative Eastern medicine dispensaries in any given metropolitan area—all of which provide tried-and-tested remedies for any ailment you can think of.

Why, then, are we not living in a corn-fueled, hemp-wrapped cancer-free utopia? Because gigantic corporations spend trillions of dollars channeling money into legislation that guarantees everything, from organic food to Obama bumper stickers are produced using the means, materials and manpower provided by the same companies responsible for unmanned military drones, deadly prescription drugs and anything in between. Confusing ability with willingness is something Liberals did in 2008 when they elected a supposed anti-war, pot-friendly president who has authorized more unprovoked military strikes and pot raids than the three previous presidents combined; it’s an innocent, but, deadly trend.

I was actually busted for weed a few years ago. I was pulled over, asked if I had pot, reminded the officer that I was a DJ in Oregon and expected a slap on the wrist. Two hours later, at the police station, I was told by the arresting officer that he “didn’t give a shit about weed (and) just wanted to give a shit about weed” (probation-officer-doesn’t-hear-about-it, parents-won’t-get-a-call traffic ticket). Quantitatively, Denver views jaywalking as a crime a dozen times worse than marijuana, or at least they did before the Mile High (pun intended) City decided to regulate, legislate and legalize the act of walking across the street... er... smoking weed. With a groundbreaking (and virtually Fed-appeasing) medical marijuana program that set the bar for ours already in action, Colorado decided to follow in the regressive, self-cannibalizing tradition of their sports teams and, well, we’ll see how well they do come January.

Since gangbangers don’t have guns and prescription drugs are never sold to teenagers by dealers, it only makes sense that once marijuana is legalized, entire cities of grow operations will come crumbling to a halt as pushermen are forced into cubicles and nametags, right? Sarcasm aside, all that will happen is a drop in the price of coke and a rise in the availability of trailerpark meth. Aside from a handful of ethical heads, most in-it-for-the-business dealers will just switch to pot. Additionally, dealers with lower moral statures will take the same approach as weapons—marketing marijuana toward those too young, too criminal or too poor to purchase it legally. This is, of course, if the already-established guidelines regarding THC content in retail marijuana stay in place. Growers will stay in (illegal) business if they continue to provide the chronic, while Monsanto Schwag gets sold to the suckers at Liquor Stop.

There are only so many words one can cram onto a sticky page in a skin rag. Before 502 passed, Washington police were required to prove “visible impairment” before giving someone a DUI for marijuana. Now they only need a blood sample, one that proves you’ve smoked a joint within the last five days (this is basically the threshold for their made-up limit for what constitutes “intoxicated”). Further, too many questions remain unaddressed by supporters. Who funded the billboards and glossy ballot measure advertisements? What did the federal government do to California when they tried to legalize marijuana possession, sale and delivery be better than a corporate-friendly, user-restrictive bureaucracy?

Bad laws are always appealed by a radical paradigm shift and subsequent revolution. Jim Crowe laws didn’t work, domestic partnerships didn’t work and Don’t Ask Don’t Tell didn’t work. I hope I’m wrong about everything I’ve written up until this paragraph, but history proves otherwise.

Ask almost any stripper the things they would like most this holiday season, and the two most likely answers would be, more money and fewer douchebags in my club.

Big wishes aside, it's true that, while it's the thought that counts, the most intimate gifts are those selected specifically for the recipient—regardless of monetary cost. My most treasured tip was a birthday gift of a memory stick filled with hard-to-find blues-rock. Although it hardly cost anything to create and wasn't much to look at, I still affectionately recall the man who made it for me and I think my tiny, stripper-Grinch heart grew a size or two that day.

The See’s Candy Man began bringing me little boxes of chocolates back when I was a newbie dancer, still relegated to dismally slow day shifts. While I was never really one for sweets, I appreciated the thought, until the day I saw Candy Man at the Lloyd Center mall with an enormous See’s bag in his hand. It hadn’t occurred to me that he had likely been doling them out to a dozen dancers. While I wasn't offended, he seemed embarrassed and I never saw him after that.

The Foot Fetish Guy bought me stockings from Sock Dreams that same year, which was also quite nice, even if it was a bit self-serving. But, you’d better believe that every time I saw his car pull in to the parking lot, I hurried backstage to pull those things on.

From poetry and Betsey Johnson pajamas, to Dave’s Killer Bread and books. And I’m not the only one. Valkyrie, from Aeropologie, told me: “I get Magic the Gathering cards, comic books, Game Stop gift certificates and metal CDs!” Holladay, at Pirate’s Cove, had this to say, “Alongside cash on my rack, some tips I received in my career included: a bag of fresh vegetables, a bottle of Jameson, designer chicken feed for my hens, a 2008 cabernet and homemade soaps. I also have been given a gift-wrapped Shun kitchen knife, a designer chicken feed for my hens, a 2008 cabernet and homemade soaps. I also have been given a gift-wrapped Shun kitchen knife, a clam hand puppet, books, costumes and once, I had a Lonesome’s Pizza delivered right to my rack! To be fair, I do sometimes bake pies and bring teas in for my regulars to thank them!” Oasis, from Mystic, has even received, “Asparagus from my favorite regular—grown in his own garden.”

I sometimes wonder the motivation for these gifts. I’m often wary of food, and no matter how tempting, I always throw it out. The very kind Indian man who began bringing me spicy, curried chicken was probably harmless, but I was suspicious of anyone who would bring me food—especially since it was unsolicited. I recall the bright orange meat splattering up at me, but I never took a bite and never told him. I always politely refused, but he insisted. I still imagine him jerking off in to the sauce, which over time, I have come to believe is the most plausible reason why a stranger would want to feed me. Maybe it’s the germaphobe in me, or perhaps I read too much true crime, but I like to know exactly what is going in my mouth. [Insert dick joke here]

Then there was the Korean woman who, two summers ago, for one month, would visit Lucky Devil Lounge’s Wednesday evening shift and write us personal checks for the amount of $10 each. Two things always both-

I’m often wary of food, and no Mystic, has even received, “Asparagus from my favorite regular—pies and bring teas in for my regulars to thank them!” Oasis, from Pizza delivered right to my rack! I also have been given a gift-wrapped Shun kitchen knife, a designer chicken feed for my hens, a 2008 cabernet and homemade my career included: a bag of fresh vegetables, a bottle of Jameson, had this to say, “Alongside cash on my rack, some tips I received in Stop gift certificates and metal CDs!” Holladay, at Pirate’s Cove, lis, told me; “I get Magic the Gathering cards, comic books, Game Bread and books. Jesse Lindsay is a traveling freelance artist and designer, currently living in Portland. The artist’s work in the public sphere ranges from book illustration and graphic design to gallery showings and film. When not drunk out of his mind, incarcerated or in court, most of Jesse’s time is spent creating surreal images and sculptures, while working at the strip bar he’s currently bouncing at or attempting to retrace the steps alcohol has taken for him.

WHAT INSPIRES YOU?

Normally it’s a combination of boredom, a disinterest in normal people and very psychedelic dreams I’ve had for as far back as I can remember. Even as a kid, I was always sketching surreal shit, in between making art out of dead things or burning bibles. And money. Stacking paper and “get’n it” are major inspirations, as I’m totally unemployable in the normal working world.

IF YOU COULD HAVE SEX WITH ANY OF YOUR PIECES, WHICH ONE WOULD IT BE AND WHY?

Honestly, I think about this a lot. I think I would just like to grab a handful of the fairies and beat off like I’m trying to start a fire. Or, it would be with the fully-automatic Nerf machine gun I customized, but it would have to be a three-way, as I’d need it held to my head by its muse.

DOES PAINTING FAERIES HELP OR HURT YOUR ABILITY TO GET LAID?

A little of both. My work has always attracted a lot of attention from girls, but morbidly obese and/or goth girls get real in to it, which is bittersweet. A lot of 16-year olds dig on them, as well. On the other hand, most people see them (and my name) and assume I’m gay or female, so I get a lot of dick pics sent to me with text like, “I’ll bet you’re as sexy as the women you draw” or “Wanna be my fairy/paint with my magic wand/suckle my Hogwarts/etc?” I reply in a like manner, but so far it’s been helpful.

DO YOU HAVE ANY MAJOR INTERESTS OTHER THAN ART?

Drinking. I love to research weird shit. I collect occult/medical antiques, but most of my time is spent making art, working on music projects, videos and shows. One of my primary focus has been customizing and modifying Nerf guns on commission (and as a life-squandering hobby).

HAVE YOU THOUGHT ABOUT INCORPORATING NERF GUNS INTO YOUR WORK, WHETHER LITERALLY OR IN SPIRIT?

I have actually! I have about a dozen designs in the works using guns and other items on mounted and/or interactive art pieces for a gallery project I plan on launching early next year. As well as, some photo shoots and live events we are working on.

WHO IS YOUR FAVORITE FULL HOUSE CAST MEMBER AND HOW/WHY IS HE/SHE RELEVANT TO YOUR CREATIVE PROCESS?

Joey Lawrence. I can’t even take a shit without thinking about that guy!
