Nominee for the West’s Strip Club of the Year
Hopeless Jack and the Handsome Devil are a Portland-based blues duo, well known for sexing up their audience with their raw and totally dangerous rock ‘n’ roll. Hopeless Jack Beisel slings a slide guitar and croons the sweet lyrics, while Handsome Pete Thomas pounds out the beats on the drums.

Their music is sure to cure any broken heart. It’s filled with cries of heart aching masculinity, polished by Hopeless Jack’s colorful vocal tone. His voice is sure to melt and break your heart at the same time—simplifying any matters of the heart you are dealing with in your own life. It’s easy to get emotionally attached to their music because it’s full of so much passion.

Hopeless Jack and the Handsome Devil’s story began in 2010, when the two cutie heads met in a bar and literally formed overnight. They have completed a tour in Europe and have relied on themselves to make everything they’ve accomplished so far, happen. The band is self-described as a “raucous and raw element of rock and roll, grounded in the roots of soul and blues. They have gained quite the solid reputation locally, as well as across the country, with their ability to captivate crowds and blow the lid off joints, by beaming out the mourning of a broken heart through a perfectly sexy-filled show. Anyone doubting that rock ‘n’ roll isn’t sexy or risky should seriously take a listen to these guys.

Their gritty-blues rock is brutally truthful. As Jack said in an interview with The Source Weekly, “The idea behind the songs is that the music and lyrics are important, but the emotion is what we want to come across on stage and our recordings. I think about it as method acting. I have to revisit those same emotions on stage or else the songs don’t come off well. So, when we play them, it’s like we just had a break up and buried our friends.” Known for hypnotizing audiences, you won’t have your fill with just a couple of hours—you’re left hanging, wanting the next show. Their audience will easily notice that they truly love what they are doing.

If their “keep it simple, stupid” style wasn’t enough to make you fall in love with them immediately, their hardworking sensibilities will get inside you. They are known throughout the music industry as being utterly focused and sacrificing all they can for their music and fans. This hard work is sure to pay off in the future, as they continue to build a remarkable and well-deserved fanbase.

Their song Break A Man screams of pure masculine heartache, likely to get any woman swaying. In Share the Covers they exhibit their knack for productivity with lyrics like, “All I really want to know is are we wasting time.” A video of “Don’t Waste Your Time” is available for free viewing on their website. Check out their website at HopelessJack.com.

In the words of Tom Waits, “I like beautiful melodies telling me terrible things” and Hopeless Jack and the Handsome Devil do just that—making them thoroughly and utterly loveable, squeezable, foreverable.

he quest for sex, in the real world, comes with many challenges. Whether it’s a sexual attraction based off love or lust, sexual intercourse creates a connection between two people with a heap of strings attached to it. Even casual sex, or sex you pay for can come back to bite you on the ass in a number of ways. But, it’s a risk we take, because sex is just fan-fucking-tastic isn’t it? Empires have risen (and fallen) because some hotshot general was trying to get laid and trying to impress some royal snatch by conquering the Holy Land in the name of premium cooze. It’s pretty safe to say, that sex is our favorite way to pass the time. Since one of the first men clubbed himself a piece of ass, the mating ritual was born. We fucked a lot—for thousands of years, we’ve been populating this planet to the point where it started to get more and more difficult to fuck yourself a good woman. People started getting prettier and sex wasn’t about an urge, or need, to reproduce. It was evolving into complicated scenarios, brought about by female needs such as romance and seduction. Most guys suck at that shit and a lot of those same guys read this here magazine.
Every guy’s best snatch-slurping scenes to the point of memory, you’re probably still not gonna get laid. Maybe you should just put down this magazine and go hit your PlayStation. But, before you go, there’s something I want to share with you. There might just be hope for you yet!

There’s a whole new breed of video games out there. They’ve been creeping up on us since the first personal home computers started landing on desktops around the world. Virtual sex is a sexual activity where two or more people gather together via some form of communications equipment to arouse each other by transmitting sexually explicit messages. At the dawn of the Internet, chat rooms and message boards were the first form of potential pairings through virtual sex. The early 90s gave us DVD-Rom games for perverts, offering virtual sexual intercourse with your favorite pornstar. These “games” were simply point and click mouse directional commands that would arouse the pornstar by touching her in various erogenous zones with the digital representation of your hand, schlong or a dildo. Each act was rewarded with a choppy, 16-bit porn video clip simulating each desired action in each desired hole. Push her buttons right, she came like a gusher. Try sticking it in her ass right out the gate, you blow your load like a two-pump chump, she tosses you out and it’s game over, loser.

Limited adult-oriented gaming was released throughout the 90s, but the most successful was the Leisure Suit Larry franchise, which was essentially a text interaction 8-16 bit phenomenon that followed a middle-aged swinger through various adventures and sexual exploits. While the occasional adult themes appeared from time to time, the Nintendo consoles ruled the roost for decades and catered specifically to a family audience. It wasn’t until the release of Sony’s PlayStation, that sex started creeping into our homes via gaming consoles. Sex is everywhere—music, movies, TV, the commercial for your breakfast cereal, art, magazines, your email and under your bed. You can watch porn movies where some guy (that’s uglier than you) fucks four hot sluts at once, even though he’s only a pizza delivery guy they couldn’t afford to tip. Even if you follow the girls’ advice columns, call every 800 number in this magazine and study the pizza delivery guy’s best snatch-slurping scenes to the point of memory, you’re probably still not gonna get laid. Maybe you should just put down this magazine and go hit your PlayStation. But, before you go, there’s something I want to share with you. There might just be hope for you yet!

With the arrival of my first PlayStation (about three years after it had been released) I remember my first gamer-porn moment when Kratos, of the God of War series, banged out my first interactive threesome with a pair of Grecian slave sluts. Sure, all I got to see was the headboard banging against the wall, but when the load was blown, their heaving breasts slid back into the frame, to assure me I had got ‘er done.

God of War was just the first. In the years since, the sex in these games has gotten downright spectacular. And, why not? Most gamers aren’t what you would call the smoothest players when it comes to getting pussy. But, put a controller in their hands, give them an hour to create a character and they can become Johnny Depp with a fuckstick forged by the Gods.

Here’s a peek into some of the latest and greatest moments in video gaming—guaranteed to leave you with a spent knob and a sticky controller.

Will Exotic help you get laid? We try to guide you with columns where pretty strippers tell you what they’re really thinking and what they expect from you. There are numbers that you can call where they offer you the world for only $49. You can watch porn movies where some guy (that’s uglier than you) fucks four hot sluts at once, even though he’s only a pizza delivery guy they couldn’t afford to tip. Even if you follow the girls’ advice columns, call every 800 number in this magazine and study the pizza delivery guy’s best snatch-slurping scenes to the point of memory, you’re probably still not gonna get laid. by featuring sex scenes in the backseat of the car, in the VIP room of the strip club, in the alley, hot-lesbian sex and more. Awesome audio tracks accompanied car sex encounters with sexy pillow talk such as, “Grab my tits! NOW you fuck! Fuck the shit outta me you nasty fucker!!!” Then, it’s time to toss her some cash and dump the skank out of your ride and onto the streets, where the dirty bitch belongs. Yeah, that’s right, the whores like it hard in San Andreas.

Mass Effect (1-3) Intergalactic sex is where it’s all about in the Mass Effect series. Frequent carnal knowledge amongst the ship’s crew, makes this a cosmic orgy guaranteed to satisfy. In space, everyone will hear you scream—when you blow your load, that is. We’re talkin’ girl-on-boy, girl-on-girl, boy-on-boy and human-on-alien sex! This sci-fi cocktease, features out-of-this-world sluts clad in skin-tight space suits that leave nothing to the imagination. Just in case you’re lacking in that department, fear not. These cyber sluts go all the way. There’s even some blue-alien buttplay. Just make sure that you bring your A-game to Mass Effect, as your character’s personality and relationships with other characters affect your potential sexual relationships. While one player might be busting a nut dozens of time throughout Mass Effect’s 1-3, some players have finished all three games and never got their naughty bits wet a single time.

Dragon Age: Origins follows our heroine, Leilana, as she roams the countryside (clad only in a pink and black Victoria’s Secret bra and panty set for some reason), in search of her conquering fucktoy of a hero. Could it be…you? You’ll get a number of chances to bump uglies with her throughout the game, plus all the sordid fantasy fuck sessions you could imagine, from heavy petting foreplay to busting an off-screen nut via spectacular camera angles in cleavage-vision. While many games feature plenty of lesbian-lick sessions in their content, Dragon Age offers equal opportunity sexual conquests, as one of the few games that features graphic guy-on-guy action. May this game be a gateway for gamers that are ready to come out of the closet? Who knows, but the odds are, if you’re spending more than 40 hours a week gaming with your bros online—it’s pretty likely that the only chance you’re ever going to get any real sex…is with each other. So, maybe you guys should just give it a “dry run” on Dragon Age and suck your buddy’s elven cock to see how you like it.

Heavy Rain features one of the most interactive sex scenes I witnessed during my research on this article. Just think how difficult it would be to bang your girl, if you had to be constantly on the alert for R1 + X X X, L2 rotated counter clockwise and double tap R3 just to unzip her pants. And, wouldn’t you know it, taking off her bra is even more complex. Technical obstacles aside, the audio on the fuck scene is by far the sexiest moanin’ and groanin’ in video game history.

Indigo Prophecy - While some of the other games’ sex scenes imply the sex without actually showing it, Indigo Prophecy pulls out all the stops with this hot and heavy sex scene featuring full nudity and the naughty act practically in its entirety. When your blue warning indicator flashes the “anxious” alert, the meter starts to rise toward the top, unless you back off before you, well, you know, get anxious... in her face or something.

The Witcher series takes fantasy role playing to the next level, as you hack, slash and fuck your way through a “Lord of the Cock Rings” adventure quest, in a full-on Skinamax series of cut scenes. Your skills are tested in various situation, such as how to seduce a “nun” out of her habit (give her a nice and you’ll have her bent over in no time) or what to do when that cool body elf merchant has nothing to repay you with for information about her long lost brother (except sucking your cock and riding you donkey style in her straw hut). If you knock all these mythical sluts well, you just might end up with a full set of The Witcher’s collectable sex cards by the end of your quest. Too bad they don’t hook our hero up with some virtual condoms, because when you’re tapping Succubus pussy, unless you’re immortal, you’re heading for the afterlife baby.

Honorable mention is in order for the newest release in the Far Cry series. Far Cry 3 dropped the hammer in a big way this year, with one of the sexiest and most fucked up endings to date. (SPOILER ALERT) Depending on the decisions you make at the end of the game, our hero literally gets fucked to death. Unfortunately, if you choose the alternate option, you’re still fucked. So, if ya gotta go, you may as well go with your cock hard. And them painted up Nubian titties weren’t too tough on the eyes either—even if they were hanging off a murderous cunt.

When the Entertainment Software Ratings Board (ESRB) was first formed, regulation and censorship was their goal. Now that console gaming isn’t just for kids anymore, as the demand in the marketplace for games featuring sex and violence increases, content rulings are becoming more and more lenient. Rather than trying to block certain content from video games, they’re just trying to assure an informed ratings system. They’re starting to treat adult-themed video games like R-rated movies, where sex, violence and language are used to immerse the audience in their stories. Their change in thinking is most likely due to surveys showing that gamers brought up in the 80s and 90s with 8-bit and 16-bit graphics are expecting more mature storylines.

So, what does the future hold for adult-themed gaming? The Xbox Kinect has opened up a whole new possibility for interactive gaming. Since it doesn’t get much more interactive than sexual penetration, it’s no surprise that Kinect sex games are already on the horizon and ready for release by third-party developers—but Microsoft ain’t buying, what they’re selling. ThriXXX Software, maker of 3D Sex Villa 2, has developed a Kinect-powered sex simulator by adding support for Microsoft’s control system to its line of 3DSex games. You can’t play these games on your 360 right now, and you probably won’t ever be able to, but if you’re using your Kinect on your Windows 7 machine, it’s game on to rock out with your cock out.

When video game authority, GI4, decided to test out the next gen of the Kinect, adult star Kirsten Price pushed the A.I. visual recognition software to its limits by dressing as a furry, a schoolgirl and nothing at all. The device had no problem with her as a schoolgirl or naked, but refused to accept her as a furry. When the Kinect recorded images of her in the nude, during game play, she would be able to share these images (with whomever she selected to expose herself to) in an HD stream to your 13-year old’s Xbox, for example.

As gaming takes the next steps into the future, sex is about to penetrate the industry with a mighty hard cock. MMO (Massive Multiplayer Online) gaming will become one great big-hot-sticky orgy of STD-free circle jerks in the “World of Whorecraft.” As long as you don’t mind the fact that the 19-year old Elf-Mage with the 38DDs you just ass fucked is actually your Uncle Norman’s character, go ahead and spank yourself silly.

Something tells me the vibrating controllers were a little ahead of their time—just think about the direction THAT could be going. Instead of Wii Nunchuks, we’re gonna be waving around vibrating motion controlled dildos, as we stab them at the squealing princess we just rescued in Donkey Dong Cuntry - Spermio’s Revenge. Once the Kinect software is ready to get down to the business, you’ll be able to scan your junk, so you will finally be able to throw away that penis pump and earn power-ups for your flesh weapon online at the Xbox store! Your new cyber girlfriend will love you, but unfortunately, your actual cock size will not be altered outside the game.

Online gaming is about to release the first of its kind in an online game for adults only called Save The World Or Not, which will feature adult film stars such as Aletta Ocean, in an interactive MMO gaming experience unlike any other. Check it out at SaveTheWorldOrNot.com.

If these fucks at Exotic pay me for this article, I might be back with another column next month. Until then, keep an eye out for “So You Wanna Know Why Your Stripper Girlfriend Just Dumped You?”

FROM THE GOLDEN DRAGON
Ah, summertime. Things are warm and people are energized by the good weather. There’s that smell in the air, the smell of...bacon? Yep, that’s right! Here in Portland there’s a little event called Bacon Cup (Saturday, August 3 at Dante’s) that fills downtown with a delicious, porky scent for an evening (there will also be girls wrestling in lard, but that’s totally unrelated in an oddly related way). But alas, my bacon lust seldom has time to wait and must be satisfied ASAP. So, I’ve got a little list of some interesting bacon products that might help anyone find fulfillment of all their most porktacular desires, in all the contexts that might imply. Let’s get busy and freaky with a little overindulgence we’ll just call adult pork products.

1. BACON JAM My list begins humbly enough with this subtle, bacony spread. It is jam, flavored like bacon. Oh, wait, it’s not just flavored like bacon, it’s actually made out of bacon and onions. Make an egg sandwich and enjoy a pure, unadulterated, bacon product. In other words, it’s a delicious way to enjoy toast or give otherwise humble sandwiches a serious pork power-up! Best to tank up on this delicious stuff before a night out on the town, as it gives you the power that can only be had by ingesting what amounts to bottled pig souls.

2. BACON WALLET Now, this isn’t something you can eat, unless you literally like to put your money where your mouth is. It looks like strips upon strips of uncooked bacon. The concept is for true gluttons only. I mean, it’s a meat wallet! No, not that kind of meat wallet, but opening this one might find your way to opening the other kind—that is if you have enough lettuce for this kind of BLT...

3. BACON VODKA So, now that your evening is going well, you’ve got pork jam fueling your body and your pork wallet making your evening memorable, it might be time to make your move and invite that nice lady you met at the bar over to your place for a nightcap. What kind of nightcap? Why, a BACON nightcap, of course! This bacon vodka is no laughable flavored vodka, as tame as a liqueur...no, no. It’s full on 80-proof vodka with the savory, smoky taste of bacon built right in. A couple slugs of these bacony bad boys and you’ll both be ready to move into the bedroom (which is where our next entry will come in handy).

4. BACON LUBE After you drank all that liquid bacon bravado, you’re gonna wanna get to kickin’ some bacon strips and prep the slab to enter the smokehouse. But, why waste saliva, when you can add more bacon to the equation? That’s right, they make bacon lube. Slather this hog juice all over any area in need of some serious lubrication (and baconation) and prepare to ride the ham train to gravy town. But, there’s one matter left to tend to before you get down to beating up the meat mitten with your pork bludgeon...

5. BACON CONDOMS No foolin’. Yes, like all the other items mentioned, this really exists. That’s right, you can shear up the ol’ ham dagger with a bacon prophylactic that not only smells and tastes like bacon, but looks like bacon as well. It’ll help augment your erotic activities like an episode of Pimp My Ride, where they pimp your sex life instead. “Yo dawg, we heard you like pork, so we put pork on your pork and now you can have pork while you’re porking!”

All these things can be ordered online with a minimum amount of effort and they all genuinely enable you to put a positive, pig-oriented spin on your life (in and out of the sack). You can go out and live high on the hog, becoming a true social meat magnate, in all senses of the word. Now, get out there and bacon up your game, pork player! Get Womstretcha’s latest recipes at OneHourPharmacy.com and be at Dante’s on Saturday, August 3 for the Third Annual Bacon Cup!

Eròticscopes

Aries
(MARCH 21 - APRIL 20)
Your stubbornness will soon come to a drastic end, as your family doctor is finally able to explain things in terms of trimesters, but will you have enough time to find out which one of you has quit smoking first? Fear not, dear Ram! Chances are you will be on to greener pastures by the end of the summer—thanks to that one-night stand from last year...can you say flight attendant? Give your old flame a call, before he or she slips away for ever.

Taurus
(APRIL 21 - MAY 21)
Marriage bells are ringing, but are you ready to walk down the aisle? If you have recently been on a second or third date with an interesting someone, consider holding off plans for engagement until you find out what’s wrong with them. Make sure your ability to smother is met with an equally short-sighted desire to solve the wide array of minor problems your new love may have. If you want to make your engagement truly special, casually move in with your new soulmate to “save money.” As the saying goes, if you can’t fix ‘em, beat ‘em, and as your court order states, beating them is no longer an option. Stockholm, sweet home!

Gemini
(MAY 22 - JUNE 21)
Convince your partner to have a threesome or you can recreate the human centipede with dildos and bacon lube. But, you can’t have both...or can you? Gemini, things are starting to heat up and summer is a great time to experiment. Have you considered recklessly diving into a new drug habit or perhaps reversing that operation for a week in Vegas? Now is the time and you should say “yes” to anything that comes your way, especially if it seems dangerous and irresponsible. If it feels good, do it. No questions asked!

Cancer
(JUNE 22 - JULY 21)
Quit being a bitch and grow up. Seriously, all you do is whine. Stop, for one second, just one, let your significant other breathe. They’re not cheating on you with their Xbox—they’re cheating on you with your best friend...so quit moaning! Your worries have no basis in reality, because you don’t have any basis in reality. On the plus side, your devotion and perseverance will lead to a costly divorce—one that may land you the reality television gig that your histrionic tendencies have been pushing you toward.

Leo
(JULY 23 - AUGUST 22)
World War II role play is fun, but it can get you in trouble if you take things too far. Be sure to consider the sensitivities of your partners, whether they take on the submissive roles willingly or not. It’s one thing to ask a teenager to pretend the Nazi outfits are all in good fun, but actual Holocaust survivors are more prone to heart attacks than hurt feelings. Consider letting your partner take the dominant role and remember that you can leave it at that. Anything beyond consideration is a sign of submission. Spend the weekend power lifting.

Virgo
(AUGUST 23 - SEPTEMBER 22)
You may think you have a clean bill of health, but STD tests are only effective to an extent. Same goes for condoms. Even if you aren’t sexually active, your partner may be. Don’t be afraid to ask him or her about anything that’s on your mind, but be sure to get a second opinion from WebMD after your visits. Remember, it might be cancer, even if you can pick it at.

Libra
(SEPTEMBER 23 - OCTOBER 22)
The future is on the horizon and all of your plans are quickly coming together like a fireplace made of straw. Luckily for you, you’ve already forgotten all about them, so it won’t matter who gets burnt in the rubble. There’s no time for work with so many games to be played and you’ve never been so social and parasitic. If you’re in a relationship, make sure to plan a big trip with your partner until he or she gives up and then surprise them with some of that swanky Libra sexiness. If you are unmoved, hit up as many parties as you can. There are plenty of sexy singles out there to befriend, criticize, alienate and ignore—many of whom may become long-term dependents. Avoid making any serious plans this year!

Scorpio
(October 23 - November 22)
Money can’t buy love, but it can buy you sex. If you’ve been itching to scratch some itchy snatch for cash, just ask! It has been more than a minute since you’ve borrowed without intention of paying back, so call up those distant relatives and casual acquaintances. They’ve already forgotten about the last time you borrowed money and most will just be glad to catch up. If you’re feeling saucy, phone up an ex. Two birds in the bush and all.

Sagittarius
(NOVEMBER 23 - DECEMBER 21)
You just can’t have too many one night stands—not if you keep drinking your way into reproductive uselessness! Get ready for the holidays. Sag, there are literally dozens of occasions (aka excuses) to open up the bottle, thighs and weekend between now and St. Patty’s Day of next year. Fuck, you can just make up holidays anymore and folks will believe you. Between now and the new year, challenge yourself to a goal, such as screwing a different person of each lettered name from the alphabet or reinventing your Loker using your tweaker neighbor’s medicine cabinet as fuel.

Capricorn
(DECEMBER 22 - JANUARY 19)
You are perfect, well-loved and, at the same time, humble. Keep it up! (Famous Capricorns: Martin Luther King, Statutory Ray, Jesus Christ)

Aquarius
(JANUARY 20 - FEBRUARY 18)
Never settle for a jealous partner, especially with a child or pet. If this child or pet also happens to be your significant other, be sure to test him or her with the occasional slip-up. This can range from a burnt dinner, to an obviously-faked orgasm. At the end of the day, all that matters is that your love is firmly grounded one foot out the door. Threesomes and similar new horizons are encouraged, but beware of the structure and predictability that comes with organized group activities. Try something truly unique, like a committed relationship, and you will experience all the instability you need!

Pisces
(FEBRUARY 19 - MARCH 20)
Happy Hour 4pm-6pm. Two-dollar appetizers are limited to deep fried selections. Three dollar micro brews served in pint only. Limit one Tunon Ring Avalanche per person. Red Robin holds no liability for lost or stolen children.

Pubes. If you’re a male between the ages of 18 and 25, there is a strong likelihood that you have never seen a woman in person with pubic hair. Generation Y has been the most militantly anti-bush in centuries. But, it hasn’t always been that way.

Most scientists agree that pubic hair served an evolutionary purpose; apocrine sweat glands (that are found in our underarms and groin region) emit an individually distinct scent, thus naturally attracting us to mates most genetically compatible for producing strong offspring. Other theories suggest that pubic hair assisted in providing additional warmth in humans and even helped males maintain erections by retaining and regulating groinial temperature. But nowadays, people wear perfume, clothing and cock rings to assist with all of those things. In researching pubic hair, I was interested to discover, that as much of history has to say about having it, it also has to say about removing it.

Firsthand knowledge of pubic hair is obviously limited to each individual’s lifespan, but in history, it appears that people have been opting to remove their pubes since the Egyptians, perhaps even earlier. Historian Russell B. Adams, tells us that no one knows when humans first engaged in the practice of hair removal, but rudimentary attempts at shaving can be traced back to prehistoric cave drawings, in which depictions of men appeared without beards or other facial hair.

In the Encyclopedia of Hair: A Cultural History, Victoria Sherrow argues that middle and upper-class women in ancient Egypt, Greece and the Roman Empire removed all the hair from their bodies. In ancient Egypt, women used beeswax or cream depilatories composed of an alkali to remove the hair from their legs. Women in ancient Egypt also removed pubic hair, as did Greek women, because, according to Sherrow, they believed the presence of such hair was “uncivilized.” So distasteful was the presence of body hair on women in ancient Greece, that Greek artists sculpted statues of women without pubic hair. This aversion to pubic hair was not restricted to ancient Egypt and Greece. In other Middle Eastern countries such as Turkey, Palestine and Lebanon, brides were expected to remove all body hair, with the exception of eyebrows and head hair, on the eve of the wedding ceremony and many Islamic cultures still practice a pre-marriage waxing ceremony on brides to be.

The dominantly religious middle ages reinforced European trends through the renaissance, by depicting both women and angels, smooth as newborns. Not a single Saint on the wall of the Sistine Chapel sports any hair down there.

However, humans in the 15th century, had more serious things on their mind, such as, avoiding the plague, starvation and not dying in general—simply because fine art of that period depicted women as bald, does not make it so. Historians actually argue that Europeans in that time period considered abundant pubic hair to be a sign of good health. Centuries before easy access to prophylactics and methods of disease prevention, syphilis and pubic lice were common. Bald crotches were indicative of such an affliction, and thus the pubic wig, known as a merkin, was invented. Another notable fad in pubic hair is that of the upper-class Victorian British in the 19th century, when people collected and kept pubic hair belonging to their lovers. The curls could be worn as cockades in men’s hats or exchanged between the lovers as tokens of affection.

The turn of the 19th century and the wave of industrialization, saw many affects as to how people groomed themselves. Homespun clothing was replaced by various wardrobe choices for men and women—made possible by the advent of department stores. Women’s suffrage and the first wave of feminists known as flapper girls, gave women a reason to raise up their skirts and bathing suits made waves in the next following decades, as they looked less like scuba suits and more like the pinup girl styles we now recognize as retro. All of these things, gave women a reason to groom what had previously been so out of sight.

Things began to change in the 1950s and 60s America, when a 27-year old Hugh Hefner premiered his men’s magazine, Playboy in 1953. At the time, it was generally agreed that nude photographs were not pornographic unless they showed pubic hair or genitals, which was (at the time) forbidden in U.S. pornographic magazines. In September of 1969, Bob Guccione’s Penthouse, was released in the U.S. (after being published in Britain since 1965) and brought their more liberal European attitudes towards nudity to the states, with full-on exposure of pubes in print. Playboy followed suit nine months later, when they risked obscenity charges by beginning to show wisps of pubic hair and launching what would later be known as the “Pubic Wars.”

For a few decades, the fluffy, v-shaped shadow of fur would be the standard of feminine sexuality and maturity. It’s no secret that most men in their middle age and beyond can still recall their first peek of pubes.

But, things were not to remain this way. In the late 90s, the still-adolescent Britney Spears and Christina Aguilera set a new standard for adult females to aspire to when they appeared, gyrating on MTV in all of their low-cut midriff glory. Since pubic hair has always been associated with genitalia, low cut pants demanded the removal of any peeking strands. High school girls followed suit and I can still remember being teased in the locker room for being the only girl who refused to mow my newly-sprung garden. Teen idols and pornstars were the catalyst to crotch fashion in the late 90s and this irony is not lost on me. By the 1990s, more than a third of the models appeared to have removed some of their pubic hair. In the new millennium, less than 10% of nude models now sport the full pubic bush, while a third remove their hair partially and one-quarter remove it altogether. Even the leading man’s magazine, Playboy has shaved bare their formerly-renowned Playmate bushes of previous decades.

In 2000, HBO’s hugely popular Sex in the City stimulated an explosion in Brazilian waxing, much as the hi-def pornography of the following decade would demand porn performers to look as closely groomed as possible. In 2006, actress Eva Longoria told Cosmopolitan magazine that, “Every woman should try a Brazilian once.” Actress Cameron Diaz recently told the story of her and her friends forcibly holding down their resisting female friend and shaving off her genital hair. “It was for her own good,” Diaz told the applauding audience.

Health professionals tend to denounce down-there shaving, as one Emily Gibson, MD wrote:

“Pubic hair also decreases friction during intercourse and I’ve experienced some pretty severe skin burn from rubbing while bare. It is a sadly misconceived war. Long ago, surgeons figured out that shaving a body part prior to surgery actually increased, rather than decreased, surgical site infections. No matter what expensive and complex weapons are used (razor blades, electric shavers, tweezers, waxing, depilatories, electrolysis) hair, like crab grass, always grows back and eventually wins. In the meantime, the skin suffers the effects of the scorched battlefield.

Pubic hair removal naturally irritates and inflames the hair follicles left behind—leaving microscopic open wounds. Rather than suffering a comparison to a bristle brush, frequent hair removal is necessary to stay smooth, causing regular irritation of the shaved or waxed area. When that irritation is combined with the warm, moist environment of the genitals, it becomes a happy culture medium for some of the nastiest of bacterial pathogens—namely Group A Streptococcus, Staphylococcus aureus and its recently mutated cousin methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus aureus (MRSA). There is an increase in staph boils and abscesses, necessitating incisions to drain the infection, resulting in scarring that can be significant. It is not at all unusual to find pustules and other hair-follicle inflammation papules on shaved genitals.

Cellulitis (soft-tissue bacterial infection without abscess) of the scrotum, labia and penis as a result of spread of bacteria from shaving or from sexual contact with strop or staph bacteria from a partner’s skin. Some clinicians are finding that freshly-shaved pubic areas and genitals are also more vulnerable to herpes infections, due to the microscopic wounds being exposed to viruses carried by mouth or genitals. Of course, this increases the vulnerability to spread of other STIs, as well.

Pubic hair does have a purpose; providing a cushion against friction that can cause skin abrasion and injury, protection from bacteria and other unwanted pathogens and is the visible result of sexual maturity.”

That’s pretty scary stuff. Even more terrifying, is the number of men who openly admit that they have never seen pubic hair on any of the women they have slept with and that there are plenty of women who describe it as disgusting. As disgusting as the eyebrows on your face? Which at this point, are also nearly as cosmetic, but hey, some people shave those too. Pubic hair is no longer a function, but a fashion trend and the guilt trips need to quit. Vagina douching, anal bleaching and labiaplasty all reinforce the notion that vaginas simply aren’t good enough in their natural state. I’m of the school of thought that brown buttoholes and meaty pussies can be just as delicious as the alternative. So despite, Cosmo magazine, Cameron Diaz or digitally downloaded pornstars, there is more than one way to vajazzle. Let that pubic ‘t’row grow ladies. Just remember, you have the owner’s rights to groom your garden as you see fit.
Masturbation: Impossible Alternatives for the Covert Masturbator

By Austin Wilde

Do you live in a dorm or have a nosy roommate? Perhaps your Mom won’t give you any privacy. Either way, whether you’re worried about being seen at the sex shop or can’t stand the thought of the T.S.A finding the dildo in your carry-on, I’ve thought outside of my box and came up with a few readily available household items that can be used to get you off. Please enjoy.

Things with Handles

This is relatively straightforward. These can range anywhere from mitten utensils to hairbrushes. You got your hammers, screwdrivers, funnels, whisks, shuckers and peelers; you have wire or plastic bristles. You’ll need to put thought into which end to utilize taking into account things like sharpness and sanitation. If you share your kitchen, be respectful and use only handle-side (although if that end of the ladle is REALLY the only thing that can stir-your-pot, make sure to pop her in the dishwasher when you’re done). Which brings us to our next category...

Water Sports

Now that you’re comfortable in your kitchen and bathroom, take a minute to look around and get creative. You can try sitting on said dishwasher or venturing out to the laundry room to enjoy a casual encounter with your washer and/or dryer. Ménage à trois? Of course, both faucets and shower heads have been discreetly and successfully getting people off since their inception, but now that it’s summer, those hot tub and pool jets can also be put to proper use. (I may or may not have gotten up close-and-personal with a hot tub thermometer years back, but be careful not to mix this up with a floating chlorine or bromine dispenser; nobody wants THAT kind of chemical burn.)

You can also try venturing down to your local up-scale Sushi Restaurant to play with the bidet. If you really like the thrill of public masturbation, take a trip down to one of Portland’s many park fountains. As with any time that you use water-jets to masturbate, be careful where you aim your stream as accidental enemas have been known to occur.

Word to the wise: you may want to avoid the city drinking fountains as local bums, unable to afford quality sex toys, must make do.

Fur and Feathers

When I broached my male friends on this subject, many seemed to have fond memories of fuzzy or Chenille throw-blankets whisked away from their Mother’s couches. Apparently these can be folded and molded into all sorts of wildly pleasurable positions. Prop it up against a pillow, and you got yourself a faux-fur vagina. Unfortunately, your juices will more than likely muck up the very softness that is providing for so much sensuality, so if you prefer this method, stick in an extra dryer-sheeet if you don’t want your secret out. Along these same lines, feather dusters and rabbit feet would also make fabulous ticklers.

Battery Operated

Aside from pressurized water, this is probably one of the most popular categories for a few reasons. There is always something battery operated lying around, batteries are easily swapped out from non-pleasurable household items when you’ve lost power, and no one questions when the remote goes missing. The stereotypical ordinary battery operated device to use to climax is probably the electric toothbrush. Although some of these may be just as expensive as a reasonably priced vibrator, it’s easy to explain a renewed interest in dental hygiene, and you’ll be spared the airport security guards raised eyebrow.

When people suggested the use of cell phones as masturbatory agents, I was initially skeptical. I felt the demo ring tones didn’t last long enough to provide adequate stimulation. And having someone call you repeatedly for climaxing purposes officially put us out of the realm of masturbation (since partner-help is required.). However, I’ve recently heard of a “massage app” that is available for iPhone and Android which adequately solves these problems.

If you’re a gamer, you can also load your favorite first person shooter and go town on your genitals with any number of high-powered and illegal weapons. Who wouldn’t want to cum while killing Nazis? Lastly in this category, we travel back to the tool bench for fun with objects such as hand drills and Dremel tools—BUT END ONLY. Keep in mind that to avoid electrocution these should be battery operated and not electric.

Edible

If you’re a foodie, try playing with your produce! Cucumbers, bananas and all types of squash are great dildo alternatives. It’s essential that you wash your vegetables to free them of bugs and excess chemicals. If you’re a devout Portlander, you may find you receive the cleanest and healthiest of orgasms if you rub one out using only certified USDA organic. And of course, what would be more fun to masturbate with than...

Famous Objects

Let’s start with the grandaddy of all famous masturbating props, the All-American apple pie. Personally, I would not advise wasting a perfectly good pie. It probably took someone a lot of time and effort to bake, and there’s no need to be inconsiderate of a good dessert. Instead, try putting a slice of cantaloupe in the microwave. A plus to this method is the ability to cater the size of the slice to the size of your knife. (If you catch my drift.)

If you’re a person of class and status, you could always go Presidential and use cigars for your personal enjoyment. Depending on the boldness and quality of the tobacco, you may even experience a numb tingling sensation from such activities. Just please, do not inhale.

So remember kids and compulsive masturbators, regardless if you’re masturbating on a budget, or simply trying to stay out of the auto-erotic limelight, there are options and alternatives for every taste. So, grab a gym sock and go to town.
When people suggested the use of cell phones as masturbation tools, I was initially worried at being seen at the sex toy shop or can't stand the thought of the security guards raised eyebrows. Either way, whether you're killing nazis? Lastly in this category, we travel back to the tool bench for fun with objects such as hand drills while killing nazis? Lastly in this category.

...and not electric. Keep in mind that to avoid electrocuting yourself, you should use battery-operated or corded vibrators. These can range anywhere from kitchen and bathroom utensils to hairbrushes. You've got yourself a faux-fur vagina. Unfortunately, your juices will more than likely muck up the very softness that is part of the appeal these should be battery operated or corded.

I have been a career DJ for over a decade. With an additional ten years of hobby-driven interest under my belt, it is with minimal humility and utmost confidence, that I claim paid dues as a disc jockey. While I started on two turntables (like any other recognized dance commander), I have since evolved from samplers, to CD-Js, and eventually, a laptop. Having debated the proceeding statement for roughly half my career, I can safely say the following without an ounce of regret: fuck vinyl.

Okay, before I go any further into calling Crips “blood” or walking naked backwards into a prison sex factory, let me clarify a few things. First off, I love vinyl records and will always have a soft spot for the way they feel on a nice pair of Techniques. Second, if you are a DJ proficient in the art of scratching, beat juggling or generally just good at spinning 12” records, I have nothing but respect for you and will defend your abilities to the next generation—all day, any day. Finally, if you are a laptop DJ who has never touched a pair of actual turntables (or at least a pair of CD-Js), you have no right to call yourself a disc jockey. With the above being stated, let me reiterate myself for the record (one more terrible pun and the next one is free), there is absolutely no reason to be lugging around crates of cardboard and wax in 2013.

By modern standards of the term, I am pretty much a Luddite. I purchase last-generation video game consoles, refuse to pay for coffee using a cell-phone app and, like you, enjoy the glossy pages of actual porn magazines. To say that I am pro-laptop-DJ would be to say that I am pro-abortion, falsely mistaking a back-up plan for a preference. Sure, I may throw down four hundred and eighty bucks every few months, but only because my career requires it. Yet, continuing with the analogy, claiming rank as a vinyl-only DJ, is like lugging around a box full of coat hangers and calling it your Plan B. In doing so, you’re basically shunning modern advances in technology, because you’re hung up (there’s that free one) on the technology of yesteryear.

Here are a few of the most common anti-laptop-DJ arguments you will hear and why they are bullshit:

“LAPTOP DJS CAN JUST PUSH ‘SYNCH’ AND HIT PLAY”

Distilling things to an essence that any non-DJ can understand, the art of mixing songs is done using pitch/tempo controls, which essentially control the speed/timing of a song. Matching two or more songs together in such a fashion, is what allows DJs to blend seamlessly between tracks. The art of placing elements of two or more songs over each other, simultaneously, is what creates mash-ups and remixes. DJ software has the ability to let DJs know exactly what tempo or pitch songs are, whereas vinyl-only DJs have to judge this by ear. Sure, most of them/us have notebooks upon notebooks of BPM (beats-per-minute) listings for their/our most commonly-played songs, but it’s still a tougher (and more technically proficient) display of talent to match beats using vinyl alone. However, estimating a BPM is about all a good DJ software program can do without a talented operator behind the tables.

It is not only possible to completely trainwreck a DJ set using the synch-and-play method, but for experienced veteran DJs, software enables us to do things that are otherwise impossible (without live samplers and piles of equipment). Breaks and drops in high-energy tracks are able to be predicted, keys are able to be adjusted without changing tempo/BPM, technical babble yadda yadda DJ jargon. Basically, an experienced DJ is to DJ software, what an experienced marksman is to a fully-automatic rifle. On the exact same fucking line of logic, an inexperienced DJ is to software what a fresh-outta-Beaverton wankster is to a fully-automatic rifle. For real DJs who transition to laptops, synch features are cherries to the otherwise identical sundae we’ve been serving up for years. The fact that I know exactly which part of Ministry’s “Thieves” fits with the second verse of the Fresh Prince of Bel Air theme song, has absolutely nothing to do with a synch button (nor is it possible to loop the tracks properly using vinyl alone).

“VINYL SOUNDS WARNER”

This is a way of saying, “I have never studied audio in a professional context.” Put simply, the technology of Ye Olden Times, didn’t allow for accurate representation of high-frequency sounds, but wax is a great medium for middle-frequencies and low-end, so people got used to just using wax to make their records sound less like garbage. If you aren’t an audio geek, think White Stripes in terms of what “lo-fi” and “warm” refer to. Compact discs solved this problem and because hippies suddenly realized how fucking horrible Neil Young sounded when unmutted—everyone threw a fit and techno was invented. Flash forward to modern times and the opposite problem exists, that being, shit-quality MP3s (which result from compression, reformatting or, as non-audio-geeks would recognize, iPod syndrome). When ripped at maximum quality, from CD to MP3 format, any store-bought disc will run circles (new punch-card, please) around vinyl in terms of sound quality. Any good DJ will know how to use those knob-by-lookin thumb dials on them to “EQ” sound—an act known as “doing our fucking jobs.” Leading me to the most common bullshit pro-vinyl argument you will hear...

“CROWDS WANT A REAL DJ”

Name your favorite, non-electronic, non-contemporary-urban genre (rock, country, soul, jazz, etc.). Now, try naming two of the most successful DJs in that genre. The reason you can’t, is because any name-brand DJ (Oakenfold, Swamp, Tanner, etc.), does not cater to “crowds” per say, but rather, they have fanbases, built upon their ability to use DJ-like talents to create unique sounds. These sounds are a direct representation of original musical products in the electronic and hip hop genres and the DJs who create them should be treated like bands and artists, not crowd-whores or club-fillers. People pay good money to watch legends like DJ Swamp juggle records on fire while blindfolded, or local talent like DJ Wicked and Rev. Shines scratch during headlining gigs. In these cases, you have what I refer to as “artists.”

The mainstream nightclub or bar seeking to fill their dance floor full of foot-traffic, suburbanites and college kids on a Saturday night, however, is not looking for a superstar act, any more than they are looking for a superstar band. Bars hire cover bands, host karaoke nights or feature nightclub/ party DJs because drunken mobs of Chads and Tramps demand familiarity, not art. Kids want to hear on the dance floor, what they hear on the radio (or in the case of strip clubs, whatever band sounds like cocaine would sound like, if cocaine made a sound other than that of a hipster complaining about laptop DJs). It is essential that nightclub DJs have talent, and juggling around between “Pro Nails” and “Pony” is always a fun way to mindfuck a packed dance floor, but the girl drinking cherry vodka is gonna stop taking selfies and throw a fit if Kanye West isn’t put into regular rotation or if the throbbing bass doesn’t last long enough for the Molly to kick in.

For example, watching Mixmaster Mike perform live a few years ago was insane. The dude blew my mind with his attention-deficit ultra-mixes of rare and classic hip hop, while manipulating vinyl at the same time like he was making a gimp outfit. The party sluts in attendance, on the other hand, filtered out one by one, as the crowd thinned down to a few dozen of us hip hop fans and DJs. Why? It wasn’t (as advertised) a “dance party,” but rather, a show. You don’t go to a Snoop Dogg concert and yell “Freebird” (well, I do, but still...) and “you don’t see a “superstar” DJ perform and expect to hear LMFAO nine times.

HONORABLE MENTIONS

In addition to the tried and false arguments outlined above, anti-laptop DJs have a string of other otherwise useless “logic” that falls somewhere into one of the following lines of thought:

“BIG CLUB OWNERS ONLY WANT VINYL DJs”

Talking with the head honchos of Dirty nightclub (one of the spots responsible for the shut-down-street-section of Portland’s “entertainment district,” down by Spyce and Dante’s), I was told “DJs at Dirty use CD-Js, external mixers, samplers, laptops, vinyl and basically anything that works for them. We are mostly concerned with format and how DJs end up sounding, plus their ability to keep a crowd.” There you have it, vinyl is cool, but so are CDs, software controllers or anything else that helps the club keep a crowd of happy patrons dancing.

“LAPTOPS AND SOFTWARE DON’T LET YOU SCRATCH LIKE VINYL”

For less than the cost of that signed Wu-Tang 12”, you can purchase something called Serato that lets you turn two regular-ass turntables into controllers for your entire MP3 collection. Scratch any record and the MP3 of your choice will scratch with it. Fuck up by losing your groove, the record fucks up with you. The only difference between Serato and two turntables, if operated by a “real” DJ, is the ability to look at a tip-holding customer and say “actually, I can’t take your request because I either don’t have it, have several excuses why it skips or can’t find it in the pile of old technology I lugged along in the milk crates.”

“LAPTOP DJs NEVER MAKE IT IN THE MAINSTREAM.”

You’ve obviously never seen Skrillex press the play button on his iPad.

“OKAY ASSHOLE, RESPECTABLE LAPTOP DIS NEVER MAKE IT IN THE MAINSTREAM OR INDEPENDENT CHARTS.”

Atmosphere, Cypress Hill, Jaz-Z, Snoop Dogg, Wu-Tang Clan, Living Legends and Cage are all cred-soaked acts. Every single one has used a laptop-armed DJ while touring.

“THIS ARTICLE IS ALL GOOD, BUT DON’T YOU STRIP CLUB DISJS JUST SIT THERE ON WINAMP?”

Yup. For a couple hundred bucks a night.
